SENATE BLAST ENDS SILENCE ON WAR DEBT

Borah's Claim President Asked Revision Pledge Backing Denied.

HIRAM JOHNSON HITS DEFAULT BY FRANCE

Hoover-Laval Parley Center of Sharp Debate Which Results in Deadlock.

(Associated Press.)

With an explosive debate that ended in a shouted dispute over whether President Hoover asked congressional leaders for authorization to promise war debt revision to Premier Laval, the Senate yesterday abruptly blew off the lid it clamped tightly upon that subject while international negotiations on it were in progress.

It began with Johnson, of California, bitterly assailing France and other defaulting nations and reached its conclusion with Borah, of Idaho, defiantly upholding his assertion that Mr. Hoover sought backing for such a pledge, in the face of stanch denials from Republican leaders.

Johnson demanded enactment of his resolution now pending under which any flow of American resources to defaulting nations would be ended at once.

"On the night we (congressional leaders) met with President Hoover before the session of 1931, the President asked that we approve any agreement reached with Premier Laval for a readjustment of the debts," Borah asserted.

Watson Quickly Replies.

Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, just then entering the chamber, quickly contradicted the Idahoan and asked if he had heard aright.

"Yes," Borah said. "And I objected that night. I said I would not consent to any agreement that would bind me."

"The proposition was not advanced by the President," Watson retorted, "It was someone else."

"Oh, no! The President called the conference with a view to getting cooperation for a certain program. There were five proposals. He started with the Reconstruction Corporation and went down the line to the fourth, which was the question of discussing with Laval the debts problem."

Borah Stands Firm.

Other senators quickly were drawn into the controversy. In the face of emphatic denials Borah held his ground; and the dispute ended in a complete impasse.

The galleries and floor were well filled when the outspoken Johnson, who, although a Republican, supported Franklin D. Roosevelt in the Sale of Shubert Properties Asked

Theater Receivers Would Sell Holdings Worth $12,500,000.

New York, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—An application of Lee Shubert, theatrical producer, and the Irving Trust Co., receivers for the Shubert Theater Corporation, for an order permitting them to sell the Shubert properties, valued at $12,500,000, and distribute the proceeds among creditors, was submitted to United States District Judge F. G. Caffey today.

The application listed the Shubert interest's assets at $11,000,000 in real estate and equipment; $547,000 in in current assets; $559,000 in miscellaneous investments, and $65,000 in insurance on the lives of Lee and J. J. Shubert which the receivers propose to sell to the Shuberts.

Alaska Feels Quakes; Cracks Torn in Ground

Seward, Alaska, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Sharp earthquakes felt at several Alaskan points ripped cracks and crevices in the ground, in roads and even in the streets of Seward, a check-up today revealed.

Following the temblors last night, reports began to filter in that the valley leading north from Seward was "markedly" disturbed; that cracks appeared in the forestry bureau road for a distance of 20 miles to Kenai Lake and that effects of the quakes were noticeable along the Turnagain arm route of the Alaska Railroad.

CHARLES D. BOYER.

BANK IS PROTECTED IN LOSS OF $130,233

Cashier Freed on $25,000 Bail as Confession Is Announced.

Charles D. Boyer, cashier of the Federal-American National Bank & Trust Co., whose confession to peculation of $130,233.11 of his accounts for stock market operations, was revealed yesterday by John Poole, president of the bank, surrendered at police headquarters last night and was released on $25,000 bond after being charged with embezzlement.

The accused bank officer is bonded in the amount of $300,000, Mr. Poole pointed out last night, in emphasizing that there will be no loss to the bank.

A warrant charging Mr. Boyer with embezzlement of $100,000 was issued by the district attorney's office.

United States Commissioner Barton Phillips, of Alexandria, also had issued a warrant, it was learned, but it was not used when it became known that a warrant had been issued by Washington authorities.

After bond for Mr. Boyer was furnished by Milton Kronheim, bondsman, the cashier, accompanied by his attorney, Lucian H. Vandoren, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage, where he entered a plea of "not guilty." Mr. Turnage set the preliminary hearing for January 16.

Mr. Turnage pointed out that the grand jury has the privilege of investigating the case, and it is believed possible that this action will be taken.

Mr. Poole announced that thorough investigation of the affairs of the cashier, who had been in his employ twenty years, will be made by special agents of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice. The inquiry was ordered by J. Edgar Hoover, director of the bureau, after a conference with Mr. Poole.

The president of the bank and other officials said they were stunned by the disclosure and had not had time to check up on the exact sum.

The cashier, it was learned, made his confession to Mr. Poole Tuesday night, but the shortage was not made

Family of Prosecutor Robbed in Home by Pair

Los Angeles, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—Two young, well dressed gunmen tonight invaded the home of District Attorney Buron Fitts, robbed the prosecutor and four members of his family, and quickly fled without searching further for loot. The bandits took $60 from Fitts and $40 from his brother-in-law, Leo Davis.

Man Who Slew Roomer Is Dead of His Wounds

Eddie Fagiola, 47, of 115 D street northwest, who shot himself Saturday night after shooting to death Luigi Fagnan, 47, a roomer in his home, died last night at Gallinger Hospital.

Campbell to Seek New Speed Record

Will Attempt 300-Mile Pace at Daytona in February.

London, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Still dissatisfied with his automobile speed record, Sir Malcolm Campbell will go to Daytona Beach, Fla., in February to again send his powerful Bluebird II roaring along the white sands toward the 300-mile-an-hour mark.

He announced today that he would ship his rebuilt racer, with its 2,500-horsepower motor to Daytona Beach January 18, and would follow himself on the Aquitania, January 25. He thus will have a few weeks to tune his machine before beach conditions reach the best, late in February.

The horsepower of his car has been nearly doubled and the body streamlined further to cut down air resistance.

FORECLOSURE SALE HALTED BY FARM MOB

Iowans Make Threat of Lynching to Defeat Man's Low Bid.

AGENT OF RISK FIRM AND SHERIFF MAULED

More Than 500 in Throng; Jurist Prevented From Summoning Aid.

Le Mars, Iowa, Jan. 4 (A.P.). Farm unrest, smoldering for months in the Iowa corn belt, flamed anew today with threats to lynch a representative of a mortgage holder and forcible detention of a jurist who sought to summon aid.

The demonstration occurred at a foreclosure sale when Herbert S. Martin, attorney for the New York Life Insurance Co., submitted a sealed bid for the John A. Johnson farm of $30,000—$3,000 less than the amount of the mortgage held by his company.

The farmers, numbering between 500 and 800, dragged him from the courthouse steps. Brandishing a rope, they threatened hanging, tar and feathers and riding him out of town on a rail.

Agent Stresses Risk.

Finally released, Martin wired officials of his company asking permission to raise the bid. He ended his wire with a plea to "rush answer; my neck at risk."

A few hours later he received a wire permitting him to increase his bid the $3,000 and after consummation of the sale officials agreed to postpone any further mortgage sales for one month.

Martin and Sheriff R. E. Rippey were slapped and mauled by the angry farmers. Judge C. W. Pitts, who attempted to summon aid, was seized by the crowd and prevented from using a telephone.

Throng Is Swelled.

During the disturbance farmers kept pouring into the town and joining the crowd at the courthouse. With the foreclosure sale stopped, they proceeded to the mayor's office seeking a key to the Pew Implement Co., where a foreclosed tractor, once the property of Joe Sokolosky, was stored.

Unable to locate the key, the farmers proceeded to the company warehouse, but quieted and disbanded at the behest of Sheriff Rippey before gaining entrance.

The demonstration today climaxed a general movement against forced sales of farm property. In many counties sales for delinquent taxes have been postponed because of failure to obtain bids on the property.

Tax Sales Delayed.

The lack of bids generally resulted from agreement among those attending not to make offers for the property. The tax sales were to have been held in December, but were postponed for a month. In the last

Denny Absent, Ball Trial Is Postponed

Case Delayed to February Term of Arlington Circuit Court.

The absence of Collins Denny, jr., assistant attorney general, who was detained in Richmond by the serious illness of his wife, caused the postponement yesterday of the second trial of E. Wade Ball, former county treasurer of Arlington County, on an indictment alleging misuse of $515,959 of public funds.

In his motion for continuance, Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas told Judge Walter T. McCarthy in Arlington County circuit court that Mr. Denny's wife was stricken last Monday with pneumonia. He also informed the court that the assistant attorney general was to handle important details of the case with which he himself was not familiar.

The case was postponed until the February term of the court, with the date to be announced later on agreement of counsel.

Steamer Turns Back To Canal After Blaze

Balboa, Canal Zone, Jan. 4 (A.P.). The steamer Point Chico, eighteen hours out of the canal on the way to San Francisco and Los Angeles, put back toward this point today when fire broke out on the ship.

The master of the Point Chico, Walter Hansen, radioed here that he had put about, that the fire apparently was under control, and that the ship should reach here tomorrow morning.

Turn Tables

Gang Victim's Testimony Brings Indictment of Counterfeiter.

Chicago, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—With Chicago gangsters aiding in the case, the Federal grand jury today indicted Henry Dechow, who posed for years as a member of German nobility, in connection with a quarter million dollar counterfeiting plot.

Among the witnesses appearing before the grand jury, Secret Service Capt. Thomas J. Callighan said, were representatives of gangsters who had been victimized by Dechow with the counterfeit.

Dechow was arrested at Newark, N. J., last night as he alighted from a Montreal airplane.

More than $200,000 worth of the spurious money was said by Callighan to have been printed in Germany and brought to America by Dechow.

Callighan said Dechow told the gangsters that the money was stolen and sold it to them for 30 cents on the dollar. He said the gangsters cooperated in the case to escape Federal prosecution.

ECONOMY MEASURE TO BE KNOWN TODAY

Senate Committee to Get Savings Plan; New Pay Cut Is Scouted.

The long-awaited economy rider to the Treasury-Postoffice appropriations bill, in preparation for more than a month by the Senate economy committee, will be reported to the Senate appropriations committee at 10:30 o'clock this morning and released for publication.

At the same hour the drive for economy will take another twist on the other side of the Capitol. Representative John J. Cochran (Democrat), Missouri, will ask his House expenditures committee to disapprove 58 bureau regroupings proposed by President Hoover, under authorization of the last economy act.

Chairman Cochran wants reorganization authority reserved for Franklin D. Roosevelt when he takes over the administration, and the economy rider reported today in the Senate may propose legislation on this score. Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, has urged the economy group to give the incoming President wide powers to realign and abolish bureaus.

The Senate economy report will contain vital provisions affecting the pay of Government personnel, but members of the committee declined to break a secrecy agreement which has to date kept any authentic suggestion of the bill's contents from the public.

Rumors that a small additional pay cut over and above the 8 1-3 per cent furlough reduction voted by the House might be included have received current circulation, but com-

Robbers Get $100,000 In Mail-Pouch Robbery

Minneapolis, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Approximately $100,000 in cash and an undetermined amount in securities was disclosed today as the loot of six or eight men who took three pouches of registered mail from a depot here last night.

The amount of cash, said police and postal inspectors, set a new high for a single robbery in Minnesota. With such precision was the robbery carried out that investigators were not even certain how many men participated. Nine postal and railroad employes, including an armed guard, were nearby, but only one saw more than a single member of the gang.

SCHOOL BOXING BAN FLAYED BY COLPOYS

Vocational Education Topic of Slated Speech Labeled as Unimportant.

Sweeping aside the subject of vocational education in the District, the subject on which he had been invited to speak, as "hardly worth discussing," John B. Colpoys, editor of the Trade Unionist, derided local school officials for their opposition to the use of school gymnasiums for boxing, in a talk last night before the District Public School Association.

"Our schools were built with the taxpayers' money, and the buildings should be at the command of the taxpayers, providing they don't bring any discredit to education," Mr. Colpoys said. "If the manly art of self-defense is wrong, so was one of our best Presidents, Teddy Roosevelt, because he had a boxing instructor at the White House. And there are judges on our United States Supreme Court who attend amateur boxing matches quite regularly.

"If we can disperse some of the gloom that pervades the minds of men in this period of depression by giving them boxing, let us do it," Mr. Colpoys continued. "With the size gloves used in amateur boxing there will be no need for hospital ambu-

Envoy Choice Rejected By Honduran Congress

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—The Honduran Congress today rejected the executive appointment of Fernando Garcia as Honduran Minister to Nicaragua, but approved almost unanimously the appointment of Modesto Martinez as Honduran Minister to Costa Rica.

Atlantique Hulk Drifts in Channel After Mystery Blaze.

Charge of Sabotage Is Made and Thorough Probe Is Planned.

Cherbourg, France (Thursday), Jan. 5 (A.P.).—The luxurious liner Atlantique was wrecked by a furious fire yesterday in the English Channel while proceeding to Havre for overhauling without passengers. The loss of lives was placed early this morning at seventeen.

Latest available figures here showed that 228 persons were aboard, of whom 211 arrived here during the night on four rescue vessels. The victims either suffocated at their posts of duty or drowned when a lifeboat upset. All those rescued were utterly exhausted when they were brought here. All their possessions had been lost.

The wreck was still burning this morning and it was being blown in a northerly direction in a rough sea. The vessel was owned by the Compagnie de Navigation Sud-Atlantique of Paris.

Leon Meyer, French minister of the merchant marine, arrived here this morning. In an address to the crew of the ill-fated south Atlantic liner, he asked the men to furnish full information regarding the fire "that this loss may serve to avoid a repetition of such a catastrophe."

The cause of the blaze, which started at 3:30 a. m. yesterday off the

4 Killed, 11 Hurt In Apartment Fire

Cause of $100,000 Blaze in San Francisco Is Undetermined.

San Francisco, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Two women and two men died early today in what officials said was the worst apartment house fire here in years. Eleven others were injured.

Starting in a second-floor apartment shortly after 5 a. m., a roaring blaze developed, sweeping the four-story building from cellar to roof. Officials said the damage exceeded $100,000. The apartment house was the Macbeth, at 765 Geary street, near Hyde.

The dead: Miss Loretta Studeman, Miss Pearl Williams, telegraph company employe; George T. Leonard, 40, waiter, and William Ehringer, bellboy. The cause of the fire had not been ascertained late today, and fire department officials said it might never be known because of the destruction the flames wrought.

North Carolina Ratifies Lame Duck Amendment

(Associated Press.)

Ratification yesterday by the North Carolina General Assembly of the lame duck amendment to the Constitution brought to eighteen the total number of States so acting.

Half the required number of States now have accepted the amendment. During the present month it is expected the eighteen additional State ratifications necessary to place the amendment in force will have been completed.

PASSAGE OF MERGER BALKED BY SCHAFER

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT.

Only one loud and vociferous objection from the throat of Representative John C. Schafer, "lame duck" Republican, Wisconsin, yesterday stood between the District traction merger bill and final passage.

Schafer's objection came when Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House District committee, unexpectedly sought unanimous consent of the House to concur in extensive amendments written into the measure by the Senate.

Earlier yesterday the House District committee had agreed to the amendments. Mr. Schafer's objection was a surprise. Conciliatory efforts of House Republican Floor Leader Bertrand H. Snell and Representative Thomas L. Blanton (Democrat), Texas, could not budge him.

At noon today Mrs. Norton will try again. Speaker Garner and House Democratic Floor Leader Rainey have promised her time for a second effort and she thinks the former locomotive engineer from Wisconsin might not be so violently disposed after he has thought it over.

Following adjournment, Mr. Schafer would give no specific reason for his act. He said, however, he had disapproved of the measure in the form it passed the House, and had not had time to examine the amendments agreed to in the Senate.

Representative Loring M. Black, jr. (Democrat), New York, and Chairman Norton were quick to supply him with copies of the bill with Senate changes. He intimated he might alter his views after study overnight.

Representative Schafer is an ardent

2 Dead and 6 Hurt In Idaho Ice Slide

Mother and Son Crushed and Four Houses Are Demolished.

Wallace, Idaho, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Thousands of tons of ice, rock and snow slid into Mammoth Canyon near here today, killing a mother and her child, injuring at least six more persons, crushing four houses, and an unknown number of motor cars and trucks.

Near the bodies of his wife and his five-year-old son, Glenn, rescue workers found T. J. Powell, Wallace cleaner and dyer, who were covered by the avalanche.

Mr. Powell, at first believed to be dead, was found under eight feet of debris four hours after he was covered. He was in a hospital here tonight suffering from bruises and shock, but physicians believed he would recover.

Tokyo Ready for Peace, Says Official.

BRITISH SHIPS REACH SCENE

Situation Would Mean Nippon's Control of Railroad.

Peiping, China, Jan. 4 (A.P.). Marshal Chang Hsiao-Liang informed the Japanese authorities in a blunt letter today that he refused to accept responsibility for the battle of Shanhaikwan and did not care to have any dealings with the Japanese concerning it.

The marshal served notice on Gen. Kotaro Nakamura, Japanese commander in North China, that further communications should be addressed to the Chinese Nationalist government at Nanking. He placed blame for the Shanhaikwan incident on the Japanese themselves.

Meanwhile, it was understood the Chinese were getting ready for another battle in their positions southwest of Shanhaikwan to which they retreated yesterday when the gateway city to North China and the province of Jehol was occupied by the Japanese after hard fighting.

Ready for Compromise.

Although Marshal Chang's letter to Gen. Nakamura was looked upon here as lessening the chances of confining the conflict to the Shanhaikwan area, a Japanese Legation spokesman said his government was ready to negotiate a compromise settlement if the Chinese were.

"Chang was warned of the possible consequences as soon as the incident was reported here," the spokesman said, "but he turned a deaf ear to that warning, possibly because of a strong attitude adopted by his subordinate generals, with whom he conferred the evening of January 2."

British Precautions Taken.

British authorities took precautions to safeguard British interests in the area of conflict. Admiral Sir Howard Kelly, commander in chief of the China station, ordered the sloops Bridgewater and Pokestone to Chinwangtao. Later, two British warships arrived at the scene. Eleven Japanese warships now are lying off that port and more are expected from Tsingtao.

Chinese officials here estimated the total Chinese military casualties in the Shanhaikwan fighting at 1,700, and they said the civilian casualties were extremely heavy.

One entire battalion of Chinese troops was reported to have been wiped out. Civilian casualties were accounted for by the intense bom-

Reporter's Care Too Late To Save Babe Parents Left

Shreveport Newspaperman, 24 and Unmarried, Gives "Fresh Start" to Child Deserted on His Beat, But He Dies After Week.

Shreveport, La., Jan. 4 (A.P.).—The men who write those plays about "hard-boiled newspapermen" ought to know about Clinton Sanders, 24 and unmarried, who celebrated Christmas by adopting a foundling infant in the juvenile court on his beat.

There wasn't any publicity until today when Sanders, grief-stricken, buried the child after more than a week of tender care and constant medical attention had failed to counteract the effects of long privation.

Sanders was just covering another routine story the other day when he stood in juvenile court and heard two hitch-hiking parents with two small children tell the court they were penniless. When the presiding judge explained that his tribunal could care only for destitute children, he probably did not foresee that the parents would presently slip quietly from the scene, but that is what happened and the children were left at the mercy of the court. Sanders found seven-months-old Michael Harper, deserted, looking up at him with mild, unworried eyes.

After some consultation with the court, Sanders took little Michael home to his own parents "to get a fresh start." Michael's 29-months-old sister found refuge in a home.

But for Michael his chance came too late and he died yesterday.

His parents, hiking somewhere along a highway, of course could not know today that Michael had a funeral bright with flowers and love and a miniature eulogy by a minister who quoted that verse about "suffer little children to come unto me."

BYRD OFFER FAILS TO EASE ROBINSON

Admiral Should Not Attach Strings to Proposal, Says Senator.

(Associated Press.)

Rear Admiral Byrd's offer to give up his naval status "and all that goes with it"—including $4,200 annual retirement pay—if the American Legion would change its tactics on veterans' compensation last night fell short of satisfying the famous aerial explorer's outspoken critic, Senator Robinson, of Indiana.

The "strings attached" by the aviator should be removed and the annuity surrendered, the Indianan said, if the aviator has "finally concluded that he is not entitled to the gratuity bestowed on him by the Government."

Because of Byrd's activities as chairman of the National Economy League, which has advocated before the joint congressional committee reductions of $450,000,000 annually in veterans' expenditures, Robinson said in the Senate Tuesday "to be sincere" the explorer should return his retirement pay.

Offered to Give Up Status.

In reply, Byrd offered to give up his Navy status "and all that goes with it," explaining he was an officer subject to emergency duty, if the American Legion "which the senator represents, will favor before Congress the repeal of that dangerous, costly law which grants pensions to veterans of all our wars who received no injury or disability from war service."

After reading this statement, Robinson observed: "If I understand Admiral Byrd's statement, he now offers to surrender his pension of $4,200, provided the Government will do a grave injustice to thousands of disabled veterans by depriving them of their allowances and vested rights."

Robinson, a member of the joint committee, left its hearings yesterday just before Chairman McDuffie (Democrat), Alabama, put into the record Admiral Byrd's service history, which McDuffie said "speaks for itself," adding, "Admiral Byrd doesn't need any defense at the hands of any American."

Is Declared Injustice.

"Those inclined to single out Admiral Byrd as a target," McDuffie said, "and declare that he should return retirement money given him, do him a great and serious injustice."

McDuffie said he had told Robinson he was going to make the statement, but that Robinson had to leave the committee because of a previous appointment.

While the committee heard from Fred Brenckman, Washington representative of the National Grange, recommendations for decreasing the billion-dollar annual veterans bill, the House was notified by Representative Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, that he would press for a cut.

Will Propose Reduction.

Woodrum, chairman of the independent offices appropriation bill subcommittee, said he was going to propose a reduction of $85,000,000 in amounts allotted to veterans, aimed particularly at disability allowances.

Brenckman told the joint committee the Grange was opposed to cash payment of the soldiers' bonus at this time, favored repeal of the emergency officers' retirement act, and urged changes in existing laws permitting payments to veterans for disabilities and ailments not traceable to service duty, which he called a "profligate practice."

Contending the Government should take care of all veterans with just claims, particularly those hurt in service, Brenckman added:

"But there are reasonable limits beyond which the Nation can not go in showing its gratitude to the veterans without placing undue burdens upon the taxpayers and undermining the very foundations of national well-being and security."

Would Change Laws.

H. Eliot Kaplan, executive secretary of the National Civil Service Reform League, recommended abrogation of or modification of laws giving preference to veterans for Civil Service positions.

The committee hopes to hear next some of the members of Congress, including Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, advocate of cash payment of the bonus, and Henry H. Curran, manager of the National Economy League, whom Robinson wants to question about finances of the organization.

Veterans' supporters on Capitol Hill will decide in just a few days what to do about the bonus—whether to try to force its passage this winter in the face of certain presidential veto or to wait until the new Congress meets.

The decision depends upon a further study of congressional sentiment and a more definite impression as to when the extraordinary session of Congress, now considered inevitable, will begin.

Byrd Hits Back.

Boston, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd tonight characterized as a "blow below the belt" a statement by Senator Robinson, of Indiana, that he was receiving a pension.

Admiral Byrd said: "First, the senator's repeated statements that I am getting a pension is a blow below the belt, for I am not on the pension list nor am I a pensioner. It is inconceivable that any sane man, who is himself a pensioner, would attempt to reduce the pensions of others, as the senator, in effect, has accused me of doing.

"Secondly, the National Economy League stands firm for adequate care and liberal compensation of really war disabled veterans, but opposes waste of people's money in veterans' unwarranted costs. The senator has made the issue personal attacks on me. The real issue is the cutting of high and wasteful governmental costs, city and State as well as Federal. And I think this is as necessary as repelling an enemy on the borders of our country.

"I am doing what I think is right and I won't be stopped."

Senate Group Aproves Nomination of Hanger

(Associated Press.)

The nomination of G. Wallace W. Hanger, of the District of Columbia, to the United States Board of Mediation was approved yesterday by the Senate interstate commerce committee.

Hanger's was the first nomination outside of routine promotions to receive approval of a Senate committee this session. Democrats made an exception of his case, in their general ban against confirmations, because of the pressure of work before the board, which handles wage disputes.

Roosevelt's U. S. Economy Task Is Seen as Hopeless

Pegler Believes Capitol Hill Will Recreate Jobs as Fast as Head of New Regime Kills Them by Abolishing Federal Bureaus.

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

It will be depressing to some of our citizens but quite heartening to deserving Democrats to hear that Mr. Roosevelt's plan to abolish the United States Dog-house Inspection Service and the Federal Bureau for the Investigation of Conditions and Trends, among other departments of the Government, in order to save money is strictly the old heat, as we say.

Mr. Roosevelt may think he is going to abolish a few departments and he may even go so far as to try, but Mr. Roosevelt has not had any experience with the United States Congress as yet. When he becomes familiar with the methods of the boys he will be better able to appreciate Mr. Hoover's feelings in uttering his remarks on reorganization.

Mr. Hoover's remarks were in the nature of a squawk. He had heard, of course, that Mr. Roosevelt intended to show him up immediately after moving into the White House by wiping out many wasteful jobs, and it seems to have stirred him up because he had been trying to do the same thing for a long time. But Mr. Hoover said the Democrats would not let him do this. It seems that this would abolish a great many jobs which they wished to keep available for Democrats who wish to serve their country after March 4. So, naturally, when Mr. Hoover heard that Mr. Roosevelt was boasting of what he was going to do, he squawked.

Like Prizefight Business.

In some respects the Government is very much like the prizefight business and Mr. Roosevelt's plan to shrink the Government reminds me of Humbert Fugasy's great plan to build super-arenas in the vicinity of New York. Mr. Roosevelt promises littler and cheaper government and Mr. Fugazy was always planning bigger and more expensive arenas. The citizens like their government as compact and cheap as possible and their prizefight arenas as gaudy and extravagant as possible and announcements along either line always make very good heat for an administration or a promoter, as the case may be. Mr. Roosevelt may even think he means it. Mr. Fugazy always thought he meant it but he never built his arena.

When the time comes to select the departments for consolidation and extinction Mr. Roosevelt will begin to learn what it is all about. It will be a good deal like trying to get a couple of heavyweights together, except, of course, that now and again heavyweights do get together, whereas politicians never have been known to abolish one job without creating two in its place.

There seems to be great amusement among the Washington experts over the innocent credulity with which the citizens accepted Mr. Roosevelt's heat on this matter of shrinking or compacting the Government through the elimination of jobs. The deserving Democrats have been waiting since Woodrow Wilson's time for this opportunity to serve their country in the Doghouse Inspection Department and other important branches of the public service, and if Congress were to give Mr. Roosevelt authority to cancel these opportunities just on the dawn of the new tomorrow, things would go very hard for the members of Congress.

To Reserve Final Action.

As Mr. Hoover suggested, everybody desires to cancel the other fellow's patronage, which is the technical name for the jobs with which the boys pay off those who elect them, but none of them is willing to cancel his own. If they should be so brash as to authorize Mr. Roosevelt to do this according to his own judgment, the sufferings of the expectant workers who waited so long and toiled so hopefully in the campaigns would be acute and many of the statesmen would be afraid to go home again.

The upshot of all this will be, as I understand it, that if the boys give this authority to Mr. Roosevelt at all, they will reserve the right to review his decisions and correct any which they do not happen to like, individually, as being unduly harsh on their own patronage. Consequently, after Mr. Roosevelt has canceled out all the jobs which seem to him to be not strictly necessary for the safety of the country, the boys on the hill will go over his report and stick them back in again and everything will be as before.

Mr. Roosevelt suggested an idea which was intended to let the boys out from under and place the blame on him. He was willing to make the decisions and take the rap, as the Americans say, apparently not caring much whether he is ever elected to a second term or not.

Serious Fault in Plan.

But there is one serious fault in this plan. That is that the expectant Democrats, if they didn't get their jobs, would blame the boys on the hill for giving Mr. Roosevelt the authority to wipe out the positions in the first place.

I am not sure that I have got all this exactly straight, because it seems such a racket that I am wondering how such things can be among statesmen whom I always understood to be the leaders of the Nation and very high minded in all things. But I am assured in a very matter-of-fact way by people who have been working around Washington for years that it has always been customary for the party in power at a given time to give jobs to great numbers of petty politicians, rural and otherwise, and pay them out of the public taxes, as a reward for their work in electing the ticket. Do I understand this correctly when I understand that a representative drawing good pay and pickings out of the Treasury is allowed to take more money out of the Treasury to pay other people for turning out the vote which elected him?

I have known of cases in private business in which people who got good jobs were grateful enough to slip a little present to the parties who recommended them. But I am sure that in private business it would be considered very reprehensible for them to lift the money out of the firm's cash drawer for this purpose.

BLAST BY JOHNSON AND BORAH ENDS SENATE'S DEBT SILENCE

recent campaign, began his previously announced speech on the debts.

His upraised forefinger accenting his remarks and his iron-gray head waving from side to side with the emphasis of his delivery, he denounced those nations which refused to make their December payments and congratulated President-elect Roosevelt for declining President Hoover's invitation to cooperate with him in setting up a new debts commission.

Traces History of Debts.

Urging prompt action on his bill to prohibit further American loans to countries who failed to meet their obligations, Senator Johnson drew upon all the fire of his energetic oratory to flay what he termed "international bankers and the international press" for their part in urging cancellation or revision of the debts.

He traced the whole history of the debts and told how Americans had "beggared themselves" to buy bonds, the proceeds of which went into loans abroad.

"The people for whom I feel the deepest resentment," he said, "are not those across the sea because maintaining our self-respect will ultimately make them regain theirs. The people for whom I have resentment are the men who call themselves Americans and in their inferiority complex and their flatulent toadyism are doing constantly what they think will win them a little flattery abroad."

Joseph Robinson Noncommittal.

In his argument with Borah, Watson insisted that the congressional-Hoover meeting "didn't have a thing to do with these debts or Laval's visit," whereupon Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, who earlier had joined Johnson in opposing a new debts commission, expressed regret that what happened at the White House conference more than a year ago should be debated in the Senate.

"Apparently the memory of senators differs about what transpired, and I wouldn't like to testify," he asserted. "I do recall there was comment concerning the coming of Laval and that there were objections to any reopening of the debts question.

"I do not believe we would be justified in inviting or encouraging the course that has been taken by the French government. France is as much in default as any nation in the world.

"I do not wish to be compromised by comment that France may have been justified in her action by something that might have been said by the President of the United States."

Watson smilingly replied, "even if it did happen, as my friend from Arkansas says, that's no justification for France's default."

Borah took the floor after Senator Reed had said he had "agreed with most everything" Senator Johnson had said and had urged that the United States meet Great Britain "halfway" in further debt discussion, but not to take such steps with France.

The Pennsylvanian said a "sharp line of distinction" should be drawn between the French and British debts, as France has refused to pay when able, and Britain had paid despite grave difficulties.

Borah said he was willing to consider the debts again "when a program is presented for adjustment of all postwar problems," including disarmament, restoration of farm prices and sounder money.

"We have just been drifting toward economic chaos," he asserted, "through a shortage of gold, reparations, demonetization of silver in the Orient and the superhuman burden of armaments.

Suffering in America.

"Now we are perilously near the brink. Conditions are very little different from those that confronted us in the World War. There is pain and suffering in America as during the war. Millions are disturbed with the thought of tomorrow.

"There is no justice in asking our people to cancel the debts or assist Europe if this vast money is to continue to be used, not for constructive, but destructive purposes."

Borah said two nations on New Year's Day announced plans for construction of cruisers costing many millions.

"These are nations," he added, "who say they are not in a position to meet their international obligations."

Memorandum Asks Gas Light Merger

Utility Commission Sends Indorsement to House and Senate Groups.

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday sent to the Senate and House District committees what was termed a confidential memorandum indorsing its own bill providing for a merger of the Washington and Georgetown Gas Light Companies.

Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, chairman of the commission, while not making public the memorandum, explained it pointed out that passage of the measure would benefit the gas companies and the public as well in that it would strengthen the financial structure of the companies and would effect a saving of between $30,000 and $50,000 a year in operating expenses.

The financial setup of the gas companies now consists of 83 per cent in bonds and 17 per cent in stock. If the bill is enacted, new stock will be issued. Marcy Sperry, president, and Wilton J. Lambert, counsel, of the Washington Gas Light Co., called on the commission Tuesday with regard to the bill.

The merger bill will be considered at open hearings at 8 o'clock tonight before the House District utilities subcommittee, Chairman Loring M. Black, jr., announced last night.

The Senate District committee plans to consider the measure at a full committee meeting at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow.

I'm Alone Hearing in May.

Opelousas, La., Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Five men accused of smuggling liquor into the United States from the ill-fated I'm Alone that the Coast Guard sank with international complications in 1929 have been given until May to prepare their defense in Federal District Court.

DEPRESSION STRUCK CAMPAIGN FINANCES

(Associated Press.)

The pinch of economy was reflected in campaign expenditures reports filed yesterday with the clerk of the House of Representatives, showing that Democrats spent only 2¼ million dollars to help elect their President and a majority in both branches of Congress.

Four years ago, when Alfred E. Smith lost to Herbert Hoover, the party spent $5,342,348.

Reports were presented yesterday for the Democratic national, the Democratic victory campaign and the Democratic senatorial campaign committees, the Antisaloon League of America, the Republican senatorial committee and various lesser groups. The Republican national committee has not yet submitted its statement.

The interlocking Democratic reports showed that the national committee last year received $1,708,507, against $5,444,958 in 1928. The year ended with the committee still in the hole to the extent of about $770,000.

Once more, John J. Rackob, former Democratic chairman, was due more in loans than any other person. His unpaid advances were shown to total $90,250, although he made a $100,000 contribution during the campaign by deducting that from what the Democratic organization owed him.

Other Large Creditors.

Other big creditors of the national committee were the County Trust Co. of New York, $80,000; Joseph P. Kennedy, of New York, $50,000; R. W. Morrison, of San Antonio, Tex., $25,000; Mayor Anton J. Cermak of Chicago, $10,000, and Henry Morgenthau, New York, $10,000.

The biggest outright donor, aside from Raskob and his $100,000 note cancellation, appeared to be Bernard M. Baruch. He gave $40,000 to the national committee and $13,000 to the victory committee. Vincent Astor and W. H. Woodin, of New York, during the year gave $35,000 each; William Randolph Hearst and Raskob, $25,000 each; M. L. Benedum, of Pittsburgh, $22,700 and Peter Gerry, of Providence, $22,000.

The victory campaign committee's report, also submitted by Frank C. Walker, of New York, treasurer of the Democratic national committee, showed it had received $581,513 and spent $576,878, mostly for application on deficits from earlier campaigns.

The Democratic senatorial committee collected $40,218 from June 15 to the end of the year, and spent $38,487, while the Antisaloon League reported receipts of $23,626 and expenditures of $23,453 for the full year.

G. O. P. Board Breaks Even.

Only one contribution of $1,000 was reported by the Antisaloon League and that was from Mrs. L. A. Frothingham, of Boston. Most of the dry organization's expense was in maintaining its offices at Westerville, Ohio.

The Republican senatorial committee said that in the year it had collected $61,492 and spent $61,394. It reported no contributions of more than $5,000.

Among donors to the Democratic national committee, since December 2, listed for the first time, were:

Mrs. G. V. Whitney, Manhasset, Long Island, $5,000; Democratic county central committee, Cook County, Ill., $29,000; Jesse H. and John T. Jones, Houston, Tex., $2,500 each; Mayor Curley of Boston, $15,000; J. M. Patterson, of the Chicago Tribune, $5,000; Harry M. Hyatt, New York, $5,000; David Bruce, New York, $5,000; John D. Clark, Cheyenne, Wyo., $5,000; Sydney R. Newman, New York, $10,000; Amon G. Carter, Fort Worth, Tex., publisher, $9,500; Thomas L. Chadbourne, New York, $5,000; M. H. McCloskey, jr., Philadelphia, $5,000.

House Group Told Of District Needs

Next Year's Expenses Are Listed by Auditor and Commissioners.

The District Commissioners and Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, yesterday outlined routine needs of the District for the next fiscal year at opening hearings before Chairman Clarence Cannon's House District appropriations subcommittee.

General statements by local officials yesterday were preliminary to consideration of the District appropriations bill item by item, beginning at this morning's session.

Representative Cannon plans to hold the hearings down to a minimum and report the bill at an early date to the full appropriations committee. Attending yesterday's session were Representatives Simmons (Republican), Nebraska; Holaday (Republican), Illinois; Blanton (Democrat), Texas, and Chairman Cannon.

Grammer Offers Bill For Private Debt Rest

(Associated Press.)

Senator Grammer (Republican), of Washington, yesterday introduced his previously announced bill for a general moratorium on private debt.

Home Plan Pushed By U. S. Employes

Spokesman Talks Terms With Construction Contractors.

The prospective home construction plan of the Federal Employes Housing Association progressed to the point yesterday where E. L. Collie, chairman of the association, began conferences with a nationally known construction firm with regard to terms.

Collie declared, however, that plans for actual construction are still far from completion. He said many more members would be needed to augment the more than 200 Government workers who have already signified their adherence to the plan.

The association, he continued, is a nonprofit-making organization of Government employes, banded together to obtain low-cost homes, which can be paid for over a period of fifteen years.

Grayson to Name Assistants Today

Inauguration Chairman to Announce Secretary and Group Heads.

Appointment of the executive secretary of the inaugural committee and the chairmen of the twenty subcommittees thereof, will be announced today by Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, general chairman, it was indicated at the committee's offices in the Washington Building yesterday.

Each of the twenty subchairmen will name his own group, it was said. Each committee will be assigned certain details of the ceremony, parade and ball to handle. Admiral Grayson will act in a supervisory capacity.

The executive secretary, for which position several names have been mentioned, will act as Admiral Grayson's chief administrative aid.

SENATORS ARE TOLD CASH DOLE IS VITAL

(Associated Press.)

America was depicted before a Senate committee yesterday as having reached a point in its economic misfortunes where a direct distribution of cash to the jobless is essential.

Testifying at hearings on the La Follette-Costigan $500,000,000 relief measure, Karl De Schweinitz, executive secretary of the Philadelphia Community Council, said "it seems to me the time has come when a certain amount of relief must be given in cash."

The bill, which is the spearhead of the drive for legislation at this session of Congress to help the unemployed would provide outright grants of funds to the States, with no provision for distribution of cash to individuals.

De Schweinitz argued that under present relief methods it is usually possible to provide little more than food or possibly shelter and that householders should have a small amount of money to meet other needs, for example, medicine.

He contended also that this would have a good effect on the morale of the jobless man.

Cites European Doles.

Citing cash doles in England and Germany, he said:

"If you have a job, the best country in the world to live in is the United States of America, but if you haven't got a job you are better off most anywhere else."

Among the succession of witnesses was Rabbi Sidney E. Goldstein, New York, representing the joint committee on unemployment, who said, "The unemployed are organizing in many parts of the United States" and added that their mood "could easily translate itself into action that you and I would regret."

Welfare workers from four of America's greatest cities were asked by Senators LaFollette (Republican), Wisconsin, and Costigan (Democrat), Colorado, whether any families in their respective municipalities, which are in need of relief, are being denied it because of lack of funds.

Many Lack New York Aid.

William Hodson, executive director of the welfare council of New York City, replied:

"I should say that at the present time there are not less than 30,000 families who are in urgent need and are not being cared for."

The others—from Chicago, Philadelphia and Cleveland—all answered in the negative.

Samuel A. Goldsmith, executive director of the Jewish Charities, Chicago, replied:

"There are no such families in Chicago, if they are willing to apply for relief."

Thereupon Senator Costigan remarked that "apparently the administration of relief in New York City is not as efficient as in Chicago in meeting relief needs."

De Schweinitz, speaking for Philadelphia, said:

"No family is being turned away. All families that apply are being given some aid."

Moscow Says Stranded Vessel's Crew Rescued

Moscow, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—The commissariat of water transport today announced receipt of a message from the captain of the icebreaker Malygin, which ran aground off Spitzbergen, saying the crew was safely taken aboard the Sedov.

It said part of the cargo also was transferred and that efforts were continuing to float the disabled Soviet ship.

MERCHANT MARINE EXPANSION URGED

Propaganda from foreign sources against American shipping interests and a plea for continued support of the merchant marine and its function in national economy were laid before the sixth National Merchant Marine Conference in the United States Chamber of Commerce yesterday.

Speakers prominent in shipping, manufacturing, Government and educational operation, presented their views at the first day's session, called under auspices of the United States Shipping Board.

The value of expanding American shipping and ship building was emphasized in addresses by Secretary of Commerce Roy D. Chapin, Henry I. Harriman, president of the U. S. Chamber, and other distinguished speakers, including congressional and Government officials.

The merchant marine was classed as among major problems of vital importance, which at present face our country, by the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University and regent of the school of foreign service.

Points to Its Growth.

"Now more than ever," Father Walsh declared, "should friends of the merchant marine close ranks and with courage and foresight strive that it, too, shall be ready to serve the common effort toward reconstruction."

Father Walsh pointed to the fact that the merchant marine, in relation to national economy, "is of no sudden growth or of recent history."

Every nation which has reached commercial supremacy, he said, has done so by developing and fostering a dependable merchant marine and by uncompromisingly protecting its trade routes.

"I fear that we shall never be able fully to satisfy all our critics," Father Walsh said, "until we starve our merchant marine back to its prewar dimensions. From 1922 until the present day the total number of ships built by Great Britain, the United States, France, Italy, Japan and Germany, has reached 2,100 vessels aggregating 14,000,000 tons."

96 Ships Were Built.

"Our contribution to that alleged surplus," he continued, "was 96 ships of ocean-going type. On a parity basis we might justly have built 300 vessels. Our new tonnage was only 840,000 tons out of those 14,000,000. We have no Rex, no Europa, no Bremen, no Normandia—only an occasional Manhattan and a rapidly deteriorating Leviathan."

The recent "fears and protests" expressed from London, Father Walsh concluded, were not justified. He urged the renaissance of an adequate American merchant marine with the restoration of our self-respect on the high seas.

Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, a member of the Senate commerce committee, charged that British shipping interests have "stacked the deck" against the United States in the fight for supremacy of the seas.

Secretary Chapin pointed to improvement in the employment situation by the replacing of vessels considerd out of date.

Aid to Employment.

"Every time one of our sea transport companies lays down the keel of a new vessel to replace one that has gone out of date, it is not only improving its own competitive position, but it is still further contributing toward an improvement of our grave employment situation," said Secretary Chapin.

Other speakers on yesterday's program included Senator Wallace White, of Maine; Assistant Postmaster General W. Irving Glover, Gen. John J. Pershing, A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board of Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co.; Malcolm W. Stewart, of Cincinnati, chairman of the Middle West foreign trade committee, and Homer L. Ferguson, president of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co.

Discussions and views by distinguished officials of the shipping field will be included in the program for today.

VETO OF PHILIPPINE BILL SEEMS CERTAIN

Plan's Sponsors Will Try to Pass It Over Expected Action by Hoover.

(Associated Press.)

A veto of the Philippine independence bill appeared certain last night as President Hoover awaited a report from Secretary Hurley, recommending unfavorable action upon the measure.

Meanwhile congressional sponsors of independence last night were mustering their forces for a determined effort to override the expected veto.

Friends of the legislation were confident they could pass the bill by the necessary two-thirds vote in the House, but were doubtful about the Senate.

Admit Improvements Made.

The Secretary of War, as he left the White House, conceded that the measure had been improved since a year ago, but added he had "seen nothing yet" that would alter his opposition.

The bill as placed upon the President's desk Tuesday was a compromise of Senate and House differences, and would grant freedom in ten years.

The Chief Executive has been silent upon the present bill, but has given no indication of any change in his attitude since discussing the subject publicly more than a year ago, immediately after Secretary Hurley's return from an inspection tour.

At that time, Mr. Hoover said the economic independence of the islands must be assured before political independence could be successful.

Hurley Talks With Hoover.

Saying he had talked with the President again yesterday, Mr. Hurley gave as his opinion that the Philippine independence bill now under consideration "does not answer the question." He added:

"When the Philippines are ready for independence it should be given them, but this present bill is a negative answer. It reduces the authority of the United States, but still holds this country responsible."

The President still has eight days in which to give either his approval or disapproval, or he may allow the measure to become law without his signature after that time. Such a course, however, was considered unlikely. The bill was given final congressional approval last week.

wet and has a reputation for injecting his side of the prohibition issue in every House discussion. Representative Blanton, at the other extreme, never misses an opportunity to put in a good word for the drys.

So when Blanton arose yesterday to pour oil on troubled waters it was like pouring it on fire instead. Schafer wanted to know whether Blanton was going to vote for the Collier beer bill if it returns to the House.

Vainly, Blanton remonstrated that the amended traction merger measure was not the same bill that previously passed the House.

"Safeguards have been added," he said. "All of the objectionable features have been taken care of in the Senate."

It was one of the few times Blanton has sided with Mrs. Norton on the floor, since their falling out over local legislation last session.

Earlier, approval by the House District committee was voted informally, due to the fact that the measure was lying on the Speaker's table. Mrs. Norton had asked that it stay there, pending committee agreement, to avoid appointment of conferees.

Assistant Corporation Counsel William A. Roberts explained to the committee the Senate amendments, which provides for 100 per cent Public Utilities Commission control of street railway power, permanent 3-cent fare for school children and direct sale of all power in the District by the Potomac Electric Power Co., instead of through Washington Railway & Electric Co. contracts.

Final Senate Unit Vote On Repeal Due Today

(Associated Press.)

Final action on prohibition repeal was postponed yesterday by the Senate judiciary subcommittee considering the legislation until today because of the absence of several members.

Chairman Blaine predicted a final vote would be reached today. He postponed yesterday's meeting because of absence from the city of Senators Walsh (Democrat), Montana), and Hebert (Republican), Rhode Island. The subcommittee has tentatively agreed upon a resolution to repeal the amendment, protect dry States from liquor imports and authorize Congress to legislate against the saloon.

Release of $75,000 May Reduce Furloughs

Employes of the Office of Public Buildings and Public Parks, with the exception of the buildings guard force, may be spared extensive extra payless furloughs, following release of about $75,000 impounded under the economy act, it was disclosed yesterday.

The release of impounded funds will not enable the office to take on new employes, but might keep payless furloughs down to a 30-day limit. The amount represents sums realized from unexpected balances from salaries of employes who resigned or were otherwise separated from the service between July 1 and November 30. Release of the impounded funds followed representations made to the President and to the Budget Bureau.

Business Leaders Gain Confidence

(Associated Press.)

Business spoke for itself yesterday in reports to the Commerce Department as to the 1933 outlook. One-third said business would be better this year.

Secretary Chapin said that of replies from 44 key industries, fifteen expressed the opinion business would be better, six were doubtful, four looked for no pronounced change, one anticipated further reductions and eight were not definite but hopeful. Ten made no mention of 1933.

"I think that feeling is the best chance we have for improvement during the year," Chapin said. Reviewing developments in various industries, he said a great surplus of raw material was being built up, so he did not fear an undue rise in prices.

MILITIA IS GUARDING ILLINOIS MINE ZONE

Troops Recalled to Restore Order After War Looms Between Unions.

Taylorville, Ill., Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Christian County was tensely quiet tonight, the bitterness of interunion mine strife held in check by guns of the military. Military rule had returned to this scene of strife between rival unions after an 11-day experiment with civil peace.

The first of five Illinois National Guard companies, recalled after the civil forces found they could not cope with the sniping and hidden machine gun nests of the miners, took up sentry duty shortly before dusk, leaving the sheriff's deputies free to round up the gunners who slew two persons and wounded a score more last night and today.

Nerves were on edge in Kincaid, the little mining community 7 miles west of Taylorville, where a clash signalized the renewal of strife between the United Mine Workers' Union and the Progressive Miners of America.

To many residents, it was war for their homes, for Kincaid was a center loyal chiefly to the Progressive Miners' cause, and the Peabody Mine No. 7, focus of battle Tuesday night, was operated under contract with the United Mine Workers, of whom many were brought in from other parts of the State. They accepted the $5 basic wage contract signed by United Mine Workers and Illinois coal operators last year. The Progressive Miners, many of them former employes at Peabody No. 7, were picketing to wrest control for their union.

Snipers picked off the workers as they approached the pit this morning. Two miners were wounded. Others dodged death from concealed machine gun nests.

Sheriff Charles Weineke, awaiting the aid of State militiamen, held a score of prisoners in the Christian County Jail and sent his deputies through the streets with warrants for 25 men and women, charging murder. Clusters of citizens, gathered in the streets of Kincaid, were ordered to disperse. Warning was given that Christian County authorities would brook no march of Progressive miners on Taylorville, scene of violence in last autumn's outburst.

DIED

Dr. Yui's Condition Called Critical Following Collapse

Famous Chinese Welfare Worker Taken Ill at Talk With Stimson.

Dr. David Z. T. Yui, internationally known Chinese welfare worker, who collapsed yesterday while talking with Secretary of State Stimson at the State Department, was in a "very serious condition" last night in the Naval Hospital. His collapse was attributed to a cerebral hemorrhage.

His right side is paralyzed and he has been unable to speak since he was stricken. The Secretary of State said they had just finished a pleasant chat when Dr. Yui was taken seriously ill. Dr. Joel T. Boone, physician to President Hoover, was called to the department from the White House to treat Dr. Yui. He ordered his removal to the hospital.

Anching Kung, charge d'affaires, and other members of the Chinese Legation, went immediately to the State Department when Dr. Yui was stricken and accompanied him to the hospital.

Dr. Yui has been connected with the Young Men's Christian Association movement in China since 1916, and traveled widely in this country and in Europe as a speaker and organizer. He later became secretary general of the Young Men's Christian Association, with headquarters in Shanghai.

He was born 51 years ago in Nuchang, China, the son of Christian parents. His father was an educator connected with Boone College, where Dr. Yui taught before coming to this country. Dr. Yui was graduated from Harvard in 1910.

CHANG, SPURNING JAPANESE DEMANDS, PLANS NEW FIGHT

bardment from land, sea and air. Dispatches said the city wall were broken down at several points and that the Japanese used tanks in the street fighting which followed the artillery preparation.

Armored Train Patrol.

Chinese troops were reported under the protection of an armored train near Chinwangtao, while Japanese armored trains were patrolling the Peiping-Mukden Railroad in the direction of Chinwangtao. Japanese military leaders said they "did not intend to proceed far" in pursuit of the Chinese.

Shanghai, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Gen. Kotaro Nakamura, in command at the Japanese garrison at Tientsin, has demanded neutralization of the Chinese city of Shanhaikwan as a condition for peaceful settlement of the new conflict between China and Japan, Japanese press dispatches said today.

The neutralization demand, according to the Tientsin dispatches, was one of three presented to Marshal Chang Hsiao-Liang, Chinese military leader, who ruled Manchuria until the Japanese army ousted him more than a year ago.

Demand for Apology.

The other conditions imposed by Gen. Nakamura, the dispatches said, were that Marshal Chang and the Chinese commander at Shanhaikwan apologize to the Japanese and that the Japanese be given control of the Shanhaikwan railway station.

A spokesman for the Chinese marshal denied any demands had been submitted, but said it was possible that they had been prepared "for presentation in the event of developments."

Acceptance by the Chinese of the demands set forth in the Japanese press dispatches from Tientsin would mean that Japan would be in control of a railroad within the Great Wall of China.

Both Shanhaikwan and Chinwangtao, the great port a few miles to the southwest, were reported quiet today. Chinwangtao was crowded with refugees who evacuated Shanhaikwan to escape the Japanese bombardment which ended yesterday with the occupation of the city as fragmentary dispatches from the war area placed the Chinese military losses all the way from 300 to 2,000 dead. There were reports of fierce hand-to-hand fighting when the Japanese infantry entered the partly ruined city which had been bombarded by warships and from the air.

Recall 1932 Defense.

The dispatches indicated that the superior arms of the Japanese army accounted for the defeat of the defenders. The infantry strength of the two forces was about equal, but the Japanese had the assistance of naval guns, field guns and air bombers. The Chinese were equipped only with rifles, hand grenades, machine guns and mortars.

Despite the odds against them, the Chinese, dispatches from the scene of action said, clung to their defenses tenaciously, reminding observers of the defense put up by the Nineteenth Chinese route army against the Japanese in the Chapel section of Shanghai last February.

Tokyo (Thursday), Jan. 5 (A.P.).—Japanese casualty reports, given out today, show that Tuesday's battle for the possession of the important Chinese city, Shanhaikwan, was one of the bloodiest in the fifteen months of undeclared war between the Japanese and Chinese.

Four Japanese officers and 15 enlisted men were killed in the bitter fighting, in which air, naval and land forces engaged, while 3 officers and 99 enlisted men and 5 Manchukuo guards were wounded.

Count 500 Dead.

The Japanese asserted they counted about 500 Chinese dead on the battlefield, including the regimental commander.

It was believed, furthermore, that Japanese air bombs and destroyers' gunfire killed many other Chinese, some of them civilians, at points some distance from the city.

The principal damage to the ancient walled city, located strategically on the Peiping-Mukden Railroad, was done by fires, it was reported here. The origin of these blazes, however, was not determined. Several large shops and stores were destroyed.

Confirmation of Gen. Kotaro Nakamura's reported truce terms was lacking here. A Rengo (Japanese) report from Tientsin and Peiping said both Gen. Nakamura and Marshal Chang denied that such terms were presented or received.

Denies Sending Message.

The Japanese military leader declared he had sent no message to Chang since the warning he sent, according to reports, Tuesday afternoon, in which de declared that Gen. Chang would be held accountable for any fighting in Shanhaikwan.

Japanese headquarters at Tientsin alleged that Chang's Twentieth Brigade was being transported from Lwanchow in the direction of Chinwangtao, an important city a few miles southwest of Shanhaikwan, since yesterday morning.

Marshal Chang Hsiao-Liang resigned several of his titles three years ago, but he remained chairman of the Peiping branch of the national military council and was charged with defense of the northern frontiers under the Nanking regime.

Actually, he remains the military overlord of the provinces of Hopei, Shansi, Suiyuan and Charhar, with some degree of authority in Changtung.

Mukden, Manchuria (Thursday), Jan. 5 (A.P.).—The station of the South Manchuria Railway was damaged today by a bomb explosion. The bomber escaped.

JAPANESE OFFICIAL FEARS NEW TROUBLE

Spokesman in Geneva Avers Desire to Thwart Chang Motivated Drive.

Geneva, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—A strong possibility of "other complications" following the Japanese capture of Shanhaikwan, inside the Great Wall of China, was admitted by the spokesman of the Japanese delegation to the League of Nations here today.

The spokesman said the Japanese were hopeful negotiations to settle the Shanhaikwan incident could bring a prompt settlement, but openly added:

"I fear, however, the incident may bring other complications, by reason of clever maneuvers on the part of the local Chinese authorities."

The Japanese spokesman added, however, that in his opinion the "Shanhaikwan incident will not be followed by extension of military action into Chinese territory—properly speaking."

It was considered noteworthy, however, that the government of Manchukuo insists that the Province of Jehol originally belonged to Manchuria, and not to China proper.

The spokesman indirectly admitted that the Japanese military action at Shanhaikwan was motivated by a desire to thwart young Marshal Chang Hsiao-Liang, head of the Chinese forces in north China.

It was charged Marshal Chang "lately has been preparing for a vast invasion of Jehol." The Japanese contended Chang and the Nanking government wanted to provoke an incident at Shanhaikwan before the committee of nineteen meets shortly in Geneva on the Manchukuo crisis.

The Manchukuo administration, the Japanese spokesman said, considered Marshal Chang's plan as "dangerous to the maintenance of peace and order in Jehol, as well as the security of Manchukuo."

"If by this small incident this vast plan of invasion of Jehol has been checked," he added, "the Manchukuo government, as well as Japan, should be congratulated."

Court Orders Verdict For Defendant in Suit

Judge Charles W. Woodward yesterday took from the jury the suit of Mrs. Emma McGarry against Jesse A. Lay, of Bethesda, Md., and directed a verdict for the defendant in Circuit Court at Rockville, Md. The judge upheld the defense motion, which held that insufficient evidence had been presented to show cause why damages should be paid. Lay was represented by Needham C. Turnage, R. E. L. Smith and A. C. Keefer.

The suit rose from an automobile accident at Mount Holly, N. J., August 8, 1931, in which an automobile driven by Lay left the road and after going over an embankment crashed into a fence. Mrs. McGarry, a passenger in the car, sued for damages of $5,000 for alleged injuries.

10 OF NOTED ARMY UNIT ARE ILL HERE

Go to Hospital on Arrival With New Motor-Drawn Guns on Tour.

The enlisted men, members of one of America's most famous war-time Field Artillery units, Battery D, of the Seventeenth Field Artillery, came to Washington yesterday on a routine cross-country maneuver, but encountered conditions reminiscent of the days when they fought in France, and last night were lodged in the Fort Myer Hospital, victims of colds and influenza.

During the World War this group was the only battery awarded the Croix de Guerre by the French government. Then it was under the command of Capt. George D. Shea, now stationed at Fort Myer and who yesterday was one of the first officers to greet his former comrades, to all appearances just returning from a front-line encounter. The battery is now under the command of Capt. Alan L. Campbell, of Fort Bragg. According to officials at the post none of the men is in a serious condition.

The unit comprises five of the latest experimental type motor-drawn 75-mm. guns together with supplementary equipment, and is manned by 4 officers and 90 men. It is en route to Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., from its home base at Fort Bragg, N. C. Yesterday the men traveled from Richmond to Washington with a stop at Quantico so that marine officers there might inspect the equipment.

Today the guns will be on public exhibition in the vicinity of the Washington Monument from 9 a. m. until 11 a. m., later going to the War College, where student officers there may also inspect them. Providing the health of the unit is sufficiently improved, the battery will take to the road on its trip north tomorrow morning.

INSULL COLLATERAL REFUSED BY SWOPE

General Electric Head Says Company Had No Desire to Control Client.

New York, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric Co., climaxed a hearing before a Federal referee today by refusing to surrender to the receiver for the Insull utilities companies securities held by General Electric as collateral for a $500,000 loan to Insull Utility Investments, Inc.

The $500,000 was part of a $2,000,000 loan to Insull companies and was the last Samuel Insull negotiated before his companies went into receivership. It was made in December, 1931.

The surrender of the securities was demanded by Lewis F. Jacobson, counsel for petitioning creditors, after Swope had read a long prepared statement about the relationship of the General Electric and the Insull companies, and after he had been questioned about the statement.

Denies Desire for Control.

"As a matter of fact," Jacobson asked, "didn't the General Electric loan the money so as to obtain control of Insull investments?"

"Certainly not," Swope replied. "We had neither the desire nor thought of that."

"But you did it to save a desperate situation?"

"No. A $2,000,000 loan does not indicate that the situation was desperate."

Swope then told, in reply to questions, of a telephone conversation he had had on December 14, 1931, four days after the first conference with Insull over the loan, with Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National Bank of Chicago.

Traylor Sanctioned Loan.

He said he had asked Traylor, who also is a director of General Electric, for his advice on the loan, and that Traylor sanctioned it, and suggested an interest rate of 5 per cent and a loan period of six months.

In it he told why "sympathetic consideration" had been given to Insull's request for a $2,000,000 loan. He is said it was not unusual for customers of his corporation to ask financial assistance and that previous loans to the Insull companies had been paid when due.

Friendly relations, he testified, had existed between Insull and General Electric for more than 40 years and that during that period the General Electric's business with Insull amounted to "well over $100,000,000."

He also pointed out that the notes were indorsed by Insull himself, "and I had every reason to think that Mr. Insull was a rich man."

THREAT OF LYNCHING HALTS FORECLOSURE

few days attempts have been made by county treasurers again to dispose of the property, but in vain.

Some of the tax sales have been signals for meetings of farmers to draft resolutions urging heavy tax reductions. Yesterday boards of supervisors in Montgomery, Chickasaw and Benton Counties were visited by farm delegations urging such reductions and cuts in Government expenses.

The Farmers Holiday Association, which is sponsoring the farm strike begun last summer, has organized groups in several counties to work out settlements between debtors and mortgage holders.

Peaceful Settlements.

Milo Reno, president of the association, said that peaceful settlements had been arrived at in many instances and that many deserving farmers were permitted to remain on their land even though they could not meet the mortgage payments. He added that in some Iowa counties attorneys could not be found to handle a mortgage foreclosure.

The farmers who gathered at Le Mars today did not identify themselves with this angle of the Holiday movement.

It was in this vicinity that the first picketing was done last summer in the holiday campaign to withhold farm products from market until prices reached a cost of production basis. Some violence was resorted to in connection with the picketing here against Sioux City-bound products. The picketing movement later spread to other parts of Iowa as well as into Nebraska, South Dakota and Minnesota.

Farm Sale Nets $1.80.

Doylestown, Pa., Jan. 4 (A.P.).—A sheriff's sale of farm property in which horses brought 3 cents, a bull 5 cents and three pigs the same amount, left Bucks County authorities puzzled today over what to do about a farmers' organization, newly formed to prevent members from being sold out.

Sheriff Horace C. Gwinner yesterday put property from the farm of John Hensel under the auction hammer to satisfy a judgment for $1,800, but he realized only $1.80 from the sale.

Representatives of the recently organized Farmers Protective Association said they attended the sale to offer low bids.

The total sales included a flock of chickens for 3 cents, a pair of calves for 4 cents, and Hensel's household goods for 6 cents. None of the property was removed and after the sale a collection was taken up to buy food for the farmer's three motherless children.

Akron Flies South Despite Heavy Fog

BadWeather Delays Planes, but Dirigible Arrives for Miami Races.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 4 (A.P.).—The Akron, giant Navy dirigible, surmounted weather difficulties that held approximately 100 service planes in Jacksonville today and soared down the Florida East Coast to Miami to become one of the features of the fifth all-American air races starting here tomorrow.

Meanwhile, fog and low ceilings failed to daunt 27 civilian fliers, who had paused at Savannah, Ga., for inclement weather, and they flew on to Jacksonville.

A number of Army planes from Langley Field, Va., remained in Savanah until tomorrow, when their pilots probably will leave for Miami.

MALONEY INDICTED IN SHOOTING OF FAY

Doorman Says That He Was Drunk and Does Not Recal Murder of Boss.

New York, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Edward Maloney was indicted for first degree murder today in connection with the killing of Larry Fay, whose barred night club door he was hired to guard.

A grand jury handed down the true bill after the former State trooper and dry agent denied what Inspector Francis Kear called "the impulsive act of an intoxicated man."

When Maloney surrendered to a traffic policeman he insisted he had no recollection of being at the Casa Blanca New Year's night or of any other events at that time.

"Why can't you recall?" Inspector Charles W. Stilson asked him in the line-up today.

"I was drinking to excess that day. I don't remember."

"You know Fay's dead, don't you?"

"Yes."

"Who do you think killed him?"

"I prefer not to mention at this time," he answered.

Maloney said he had no reason to kill Fay because he had been "tickled to death" to get the job as doorman two weeks ago, although he admitted Fay had berated him for over-critical scrutiny of those who knocked at the grill.

The indictment against him was returned after seven witnesses testified before the grand jury, five of whom were held as material witnesses. None actually saw the shooting in the thick-carpeted restaurant foyer, where Fay reclined alone on a couch, but some of them said they saw Maloney and Fay together there before five shots rang out, and heard an argument.

Fay had no financial interest in the Casa Blanca, but was taken in the syndicate which operated it because of his experience in running such resorts.

SCHOOLS BOXING BAN FLAYED BY COLPOYS

Mr. Colpoys said that he knows of an important group in Washington vitally interested in the subject of boxing in the schools. "Don't be narrow," he appealed to the association. "Let us open our schools for what the people want."

Prior to Mr. Colpoys' talk, the association had gone on record opposing the use of school gymnasiums by outside institutions and groups for boxing, but recommending that they might be used for this sport by the schools themselves.

In discussing vocational education, Mr. Colpoys adopted a pessimistic tone. The vast increase in unemployment has proven a need for a reorganization in this type of education, plus the problem of what training to give, he said. "There is not much to be said for vocational education in Washington," he added.

"Education in Washington," he declared, "has become an autocracy rather than a democracy. There is need for a deeper interest in all types of education on the part of the Board of Education. The board, at its meetings, appears too eager to rush business through. The members are too close to our school problems. They are unable to get a proper perspective. This is as true of vocational and other types of education as it is of the question of boxing."

The association was also addressed by Maris M. Proffitt, of the U. S. Office of Education, on "Some Present Trends in Vocational Education," and by Miss Selma M. Borchardt, of Roosevelt High School, on "The Why and How of Vocational Education."

MARATHON COUNSEL IS OUSTED BY BRIDE

Seal Resigns as Assistant After Representing Dance in Court.

Because he represented the Marathon Exhibition Co., Inc., Elwood H. Seal, young attorney, was forced to resign yesterday as assistant corporation counsel by Corporation Counsel William W. Bride. Mr. Seal's resignation was demanded after Mr. Bride's attention had been called to a newspaper article stating that Mr. Seal had represented the marathon dance promoters in District Supreme Court Tuesday, when the All States Hotel sought an injunction against the exhibition.

The District Commissioners some time ago attempted to ban marathon dance contests from the city by issuing a regulation prohibiting the staging of any dance more than 12 hours in any consecutive 24. Promoters of the present exhibition evaded this order by arranging alternate couples, who danced only 15 minutes at a time.

Mr. Seal explained the marathon dance promoters were clients prior to his acceptance of a temporary appointment in the corporation counsel's office, and he felt he could not relinquish his private business entirely because of the temporary nature of his position.

BILLION REDUCTION IN BUDGET SOUGHT

Henry Harriman Says Sum Could Be Saved if U. S. Got Out of Trade.

(Associated Press.)

A slash of $1,100,000,000 in Federal appropriations—approximately the amount of the Treasury deficit for the first half of the current fiscal year—was proposed last night by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

This extraordinary reduction in expenditures was urged upon Congress on the eve of President-elect Roosevelt's conference with his party's legislative leaders, at which the reestablishment of a balanced budget will be a major topic.

Henry I. Harriman, president of the chamber, made the proposal in a letter to the House appropriations committee. It said the saving can be achieved by putting all Federal activities back on the basis of 1925 operations, and by withdrawing the Government entirely from activity competing with private business.

The extent of the deficit for the first six months of the year was shown by yesterday's Government balance sheet.

As of December 30 the figures showed the United States $1,159,286,502 behind.

While advices from New York are definite that President-elect Roosevelt intends that the present Congress shall balance the budget for 1934, Speaker Garner yesterday said the steps that will be taken to achieve it will depend largely on whether the beer-legalizing bill becomes law and upon the extent of economies legislated at this session.

He calculated that the beer bill would bring in $200,000,000 and expected that from $150,000,000 to $200,000,000 in economies would be recommended. But he said the amount of deficit to be looked for next year "is all a guess," adding:

"Under present business conditions, present taxes and present expenditures, in my judgment, the budget will not be balanced. I think it ought to be balanced."

Attack on Federal Employes Scored

Federation Head Answers Charge of Pressure on Congress.

Striking back at charges that organized Government employes are attempting to influence Congress unduly, Michael D. Schaefer, president of the District Department of the American Federation of Government Employes, last night declared at a meeting of the national organization committee it is an absolute necessity for Government workers to assert their rights.

"The statement has been made that organized Federal employes are trying unduly to influence Congress," he said.

"That is untrue. As citizens of the United States we merely endeavor to point out to Congress the injustices that are done to us or legislation that is needed to improve our working conditions. Cutting Federal salaries to balance a budget that can not be balanced is not justice, and any fair-minded person, whether congressman or private citizen, will agree with us."

Lumberman Loses In Judd Case Fight

Court Refuses to Dismiss Indictment as Accessory in Murder.

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 4 (A.P.).—John J. Halloran lost today the first skirmish in his fight to have quashed the indictment accusing him of having concealed from authorities alleged knowledge of the double slaying for which Winnie Ruth Judd is sentenced to die February 17.

Superior Judge Howard C. Speakman refused to set aside the indictment, against which Halloran's counsel had argued on grounds of alleged unfairness and illegality in the selection of the grand jury, and alleged bias and prejudice on the part of the grand jurors.

The Phoenix lumberman countered with a demurrer, challenging the indictment itself on nine points of alleged deficiency. At least another day in court, it was indicated, will be consumed by argument before it is decided whether Halloran must enter a plea to the charge of accessory to the crime of murder.

Zamora Snub Laid At Laughlin's Door

U. S. Envoy Said to Have Resented Ranking of Spanish Speaker.

(Associated Press.)

The subject of dinner table precedence, which has languished here since the Gann-Longworth controversy ended, has been brought to life again by the American Ambassador in Spain.

The story, recounted with relish over the Capital teacups, is that our dignified and formal Ambassador, Irwin B. Laughlin, remained away from President Zamora's dinner for the diplomatic corps in protest against the speaker of the Cortes receiving precedence over ambassadors. "We have had no official report, but it might well be true," was the comment at the State Department.

The Federal Diary

By GEORGE D. RILEY

THOUSANDS of Government employes, and other workers, for that matter, in Washington and elsewhere will be up against it during 1933. Their salaries have been cut, furloughs have been imposed and their work shared with others. One thing is sure—they are all going to have plenty of time on their hands! What can they do with their spare time and how can they use it to supply the necessary cash to balance the family budget?

RILEY.

Here are a few example of such activities:

One Government clerk was on the point of selling his car as the result of the pay cut, but this would mean moving closer to town, higher rents and many other inconveniences—no, he had to keep his car; but how? He looked around in his neighborhood and found three other men going to work at the same time and returning from work at the same time and working within a few blocks of each other. Arrangements were made for sharing the expense of operating one automobile, and this man's transportation expense was cut to a fraction of what it had been last year.

Furthermore, his family continues to enjoy rides in the country on Sunday. Gasoline, oil and other expense for the upkeep of the car still continue to give work to other people, so after all this clerk that used his brain not only benefited himself but also contributed his bit to keep the wheels of industry turning!

A spinster, having enjoyed for years a comfortable income on her investments, found herself reduced to practically nothing. Should she impose on her hard-pressed relatives or what? She was handy with a needle and had no difficulty in finding a number of families who required a person to darn socks, sew on buttons and mend. She now makes $60 a month, and is self-supporting.

Another Government worker, who for years had tried to eke out an existence on a small Government salary found it impossible to give his children a college education. His wife stepped in and opened a small candy shop in Washington, which rapidly developed into one of the best-known confectionary stores in the city. The children are all through college now.

There is a well-known figure in Washington who is a professional fourth hand at bridge. Whether we approve or disapprove of playing bridge for money, it can not be stopped, people continue to play. What do people in Washington do when the fourth man can not come to the party? They call on Mr. Blank, who in the daytime is pounding the keys of his typewriter in a Government office. He is the professional fourth man and is such a shark at the game that he manages to double his Government salary.

There are a number of both men and women in Government service who are picking up considerable pinmoney by teaching bridge, and one of the finest orchestras in the East is directed and owned by a clerk in one of the Government departments.

One enterprising engineer used his furlough in his own workshop making a practical household article for which a local department store developed a large demand. It must be said to the credit of a public-spirited Washington banker that he advanced the money for the raw materials without asking for security.

One of the guards in one of the departments is making rope hammocks. He used to be a sailor and learned the trick on board ship. Of course, around the holidays and Christmas time many wives of Government clerks are making money by selling fruit cake, candy, Christmas cards and novelties.

"Evidently people can not afford to spend as much as during good times, but that should not prevent us from keeping up appearances by exerting ourselves," observes Dr. Axel H. Oxholm, wood utilization committee director. "For instance, in most articles we buy it is the finishing process that runs the cost up. Why not carry out the excellent idea inaugurated by the furniture industry of selling unfinished furniture, leaving it to the home folks to paint and decorate. This can be carried out in numerous other lines. Many industries are already preparing for this change in consumer habits. A remnant of brocade now furnishes material for an attractive handbag, and Miss America need not feel that her inability to spend the necessary money for an imported French handbag will cause her to lose her chic!

"Millions of children this Christmas received their toys because enterprising organizations and individuals undertook to repair old toys. Clothes are made over, shoes are soled and, in short, the entire nation is bending every effort to keep up appearances by personal efforts. Instead of placing their sole dependency on securing a job and relying on other people to furnish the initiative millions of Americans have found that they must create their own jobs and be their own bosses."

A colored man in one of the Government departments here has developed a large business through the sale of a hair straightening preparation which is not only going well in the United States but is also being exported to Latin America.

"WE could still see the place where Swarmi sat and sat." Thus read the lines of the last installment of Mr. Fedd's unfortunate experiences in the French metropolis. Go ahead:

The two days elapsed—just as two days will elapse sometimes.

At the end of that time the jailer, keys clanking and all, turned the lock in Swarmi's cell and swung wide those cold prison bars, made famous in the "Prisoner's Song." Swarmi thought he heard the pit-a-pat of rain without. He had wished that he had had a cell with running water but he got it without. Said he:

"I'll stick. I have that sticky feeling. I can't go out in such weather. I'll stay indoors in the keeper's office." So he stood pat.

And bless Pat, if the keepers didn't think he preferred, judging by his gesticulations, to stay in the cell, and so——

(To be continued)

"The other day," said Mary G. Worthley, mathematics teacher, McKinley High School, "I was driven home by a taxi driver who quoted Burns in Scotch all the way. He received his M. A. in languages from the University of Edinburgh, came to the United States and entered the Government service as a civil engineer, was turned off when the budget was out—and now drives a taxi and quotes Burns."

But we just can't see how they get cows to sit on those little bottles they serve in Government cafeterias. Or do you assume cows have nothing to do with it, since you get your milk from the milkman?

Lieut. Charles J. P. Weber, District Police, tells this:

Sheriff passing through Washington called headquarters and asked if they had a key for a pair of handcuffs. He had lost his. He was told they had keys for almost any kind of "cuffs." It was suggested the sheriff haul his prisoner to headquarters for the accommodation.

"I can't," said the sheriff.

"Why?"

"Because he's on a train, one 'cuff' is attached to the train and it's almost leaving time."

One of the things we'd like to know
Is why those waiters treat us so;
They serve the stuff so nice and brown,
Then give us our check upside down.

Date worth remembering—Sunday, January 15, 1933. . . .The old glass doorknob reveals to Swarmi Fedd that there will be a double-page announcement in The Washington Post that will create a sensation among the feminine employes of Uncle Sam. Remember the date—Sunday, January 15—and be sure to see The Washington Post that day.

Wouldn't it be great to express one's feelings now and then in ten or more languages. At any rate Cary Sage, translation unit, Commerce, is back on the job from two weeks' furlough. Among other things, we know and the wife thoroughly enjoyed "Blossom Time" one afternoon.

Observing Lent in and out of season and observing Lent every day from now on. We learn Hunter Mulford, Domestic Commerce Division, recently induced Margaret Lent to add "Mulford" to her name. 'Twas the day after Christmas. Best wishes. We all need them.

Nominations will be in order and election will be held Monday at 8 p. m., when General Accounting Office Lodge, No. 8, A. F. G. E., meets at 1726 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, at which time a permanent charter will be presented.

JIM PRESTON, for many years in charge of the Senate press gallery, always said Richard H. Tilley, when a Senate page, would "make good" when he grew up. Well, Jim's prophecy has come true. It's a boy! That is to say, Tilley, now an important cog in the mail and file section of the Federal Radio Commission, is married and is a proud daddy.

To his other Chesterfieldian habits Tilley has added a new strut expressing his glee. He has decided to name the boy—it weighed 8 pounds 11 ounces, when born a few days ago—Richard 3d.

Some might suggest Richard the Lionhearted, but Richard III was a famous character, too.

Those mentions we've been making regarding guppyis are bringing results. Mrs. Barbara Aller, Fisheries, who has just returned to her desk, is supplying a Washington commercial bank vice president with guppyis from her private collection as a starter for an aquarium.

Then, too, it should take almost no time to reply to those 150 letters from Chicago wanting information on upkeep of tropical fish. If the fish are eatable, the upkeep should be very low. Pardon, Mrs. Aller, if we seem to answer your letters for you—or have we been reading your mail?

If you know all the answers, spelling's easy. It was easy for Miss Idell Reid, Quartermasters Corps, Tuesday evening at War Department Union, No. 261, N. F. F. E., meeting. Too bad, but John G. Spengler, runnerup, stumbled on "indispensable."

Ulrey J. Biller, seventh vice president, N. F. F. E., told the members that "while all other Federal employes had been organized for years, they were unable to make progress in securing retirement until the National Federation of Federal Employes was formed."

"Those in control of the country's money control its credit. Those who control its credit control its politics They dictate that labor is the last element of Government to be served. If there is not enough money for other interests, labor must be reduced. * * * We must now avert a permanent reduction in income."

President Gertrude E. Coyle introduced Frank B. Hunt and William S. Kinney, who are charter members of No. 261. Guests included Miss Matilda Lindsey and John D. Cloud, national organizers.

If you've been doing it, stop it. Effective right now, jewelry and precious stones are prohibited in parcel post to Spain, we are informed by W. Irving Glover, Second Assistant Postmaster General. Seems Spain has put a ban on it.

Oyster investigations chief, Dr. Paul Galtsoff, Fisheries, attended the American Association for the Advancement of Science meeting, Atlantic City, recently. But he's home now.

In the Navy Department we learn thta Dorothy Porterfield, Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, is visiting friends in South Carolina. John Dwyer has been visiting in Boston. Also that Miss Clare Murphy, secretary to the surgeon general, U. S. Navy, has been in Boston visiting her parents. Back January 16. And that Miss Mildred F. Crocker is her sister's guest.

In recognition of 50 years' service in the War Department Col. Charles Cyrus Coombs, Auxiliary Reserve, on duty in the office of the chief of chemical warfare, was presented with an onyx desk set yesterday. Maj. Gen. Harry L. Gilchrist, chief of the Chemical Warfare Service, made the presentation on behalf of personnel in the office and briefly reviewed Col. Coombs' career in Government service.

Col. Coombs, born in California, Mo., August 18, 1863, began Government service when 12 as House of Representatives page. At 19 he became private secretary to Senator George G. Vest, of Missouri.

Robert T. Lincoln, Secretary of War, appointed him clerk in the office of the surgeon general January 3, 1883. For 35 years he worked in the same office, and on July 16, 1918, he resigned his civil position and joined the Army. He was commissioned major, Chemical Warfare Service, and placed in charge of its finance division. He served in the Army until June 30, 1921, and upon discharge was commissioned a major in the Chemical Warfare Reserve. Since then he has risen to the rank of colonel. On August 13, 1927, he was transferred to the Auxiliary Reserve.

Since July 1, 1921, Col. Coombs has been law clerk and assistant in the office of the chief of Chemical Warfare Service.

BUREAU OF IMMIGRATION employes, facing another 30-day payless furlough during the next six months, besides the five-day week they now are operating upon, found a champion yesterday on the House floor in Chairman Samuel Dickstein, House immigration committee.

Dickstein was nearly successful in writing a $606,000 appropriation item into the deficiency bill, which would have spared them further payless furloughs. Backed by Representative LaGuardia (Republican), New York; Representative Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, and others, Dickstein obtained favorable viva voce and division votes on his amendment. Opposed by Chairman Joseph W. Byrns, the amendment later was defeated on a 168-to-113 roll call.

Assistant Commissioner General of Immigration W. H. Wagner recently told a House appropriation subcommittee the 30-day furloughs would be in effect Jauuary 1, and be spread over a six months' period.

The House yesterday voted a $20,000 increase for Immigration Bureau salaries, which was recommended by the subcommittee, making it unnecessary for the bureau to operate four months on a three-day week, which otherwise would have been necessary.

Wagner told the subcommittee:

"We are working on a five-day week. The administrative furlough will reduce that to a 4-day week. The remaining $20,000 deficit is equivalent to anothed administrative furlough of about eighteen days. Hence, we would be working about four months on a three-day week and two months on a four-day week."

Smith at Funeral Of Mrs. Moskowitz

Mrs. Roosevelt Is Among Other Notables Attending Rites in New York.

New York, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Alfred E. Smith, his head bowed in grief, joined with 3,000 sorrowing New Yorkers today in paying final respect to the memory of Mrs. Belle Moskowitz, whose friendship and counsel were his over a period of two decades of political activity.

From humble homes on the East Side and from places high in the offices of the State and Nation, shawled mourners and dignitaries alike came to Temple Emanu-el at Fifth avenue and Sixty-fifth street to attend funeral services for the noted woman, and later many—with tears coursing down their cheeks—followed the body to its resting place in the Sleepy Hollow Cemetery in Tarrytown. Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of the Free Synagogue, officiated.

Besides the Smith family, other notables attending included Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President-elect, and John J. Raskob, former chairman of the Democratic national committee.

17 DEAD, 211 SAVED AS BIG LINER BURNS

Isle of Guernsey, remained undetermined this morning.

The steamer Pollux last night reported the Atlanique afloat 24 miles off Casquets, west of Alderney. The boat was so hot it was impossible to board her.

M. Meyer announced this morning that Capt. Schoof, master of the liner, with fifteen men had decided to try to tow the burning remains of the ship to Cherbourg, although a conference of naval authorities came to the conclusion that the task was almost impossible.

Second Capt. Gustave Gaston said that "within five minutes after the alarm, the crew was at all the fire stations. At 6 a. m. yesterday we realized that nothing more could be done.

"The atmosphere was not breathable. In the first-class deck cabins, flames roared as in a forge. The fire spread with incredible rapidity. We lowered the boats into a fast-running sea with visibility at zero."

Twenty-seven survivors were taken to a hospital. Most seriously injured were Leon Jullemier, the ship's doctor, and Gaston Le Metayer, engineer's officer. Most of the others were only slightly injured.

Captain Saved From Sea.

Capt. Schoof was the last to leave the ship. He leaped into the sea and was picked up by a small boat from the steamer Achilles, which, with the Ruhr and the Ford Castle, brought the survivors to Cherbourg.

Men in the boiler rooms were burned to death, the captain told port authorities, and others were overcome by smoke before they could escape. He explained that no radio distress messages were sent out because the operator was asphyxiated at his post.

The fire started at 3:30 a. m., in one of the first class cabins, and spread quickly throughout the entire 41,000-ton vessel.

The Atlantique, owned by the Compagnie de Navigation Sud-Atlantique, of Paris, was one of the largest and fastest passenger liners flying the flag of France. She was designed to make the journey from Bordeaux to Buenos Aires in sixteen days.

She had left Bordeaux Tuesday morning for her annual overhauling at Havre.

The ship was built at San Nazaire and was launched in September, 1931. There were accommodations aboard for 1,234 passengers.

"I received first word of the fire at 3:30 o'clock," Capt. Schoof said last night, "and by 4:30 it was apparent that we could not control the flames by our own means. At 6 o'clock all hands were ordered on deck to abandon the ship."

Paper Sees Sabotage.

The destruction of the Atlantique was the fourth major loss to the French merchant marine in recent years by fire, the others being the Paul Lecat, December 30, 1928; the Asia, May 22, 1930, and the George Philliipar, May 16, 1932.

La Liberte, Nationalist newspaper, suggests sabotage, while Le Matin says the coincidences are too startling to appear accidental.

Some of the men who disappeared are believed to have drowned, as one life boat was upset by the cable breaking or burning, and the occupants were thrown into the sea.

"Public opinion in France is beginning to be disturbed by the disasters which have struck our most beautiful vessels with tragic recurrence," said Minister of Merchant Marine Meyer. "It has need to be reassured. The inquiry will be minute and severe."

MARYLAND HOUSE CUTS STAFF'S PAY

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 4.—Economy, which promises to be the byword of the Maryland Legislature, was injected into the first minutes of the first session of the House of Delegates today when a resolution calling for a cut of 20 per cent in the salaries of legislative attendants was introduced and passed.

The measure was a compromise one, agreed on after Francis Michel, deposed speaker, and James J. Lindsay, jr., Democratic floor leader, had threatened to back a move to reduce the number of attendants. Michel was ousted from the speakership by the Baltimore City delegation after he had threatened a reduction. Today, when it appeared that the reduction might still be made, the House was recessed while State and city powers conferred with Lindsay and Michel.

Pay Cut Proposed.

After the conference Lindsay introduced the resolution calling for 20 per cent of the salary appropriations, except that for the desk clerks, to be turned back to the Treasury. Michel spoke in favor of the resolution, as did Oliver Metzerott, floor leader of the House. It was then passed, after an amendment offered by C. Damer McKendrick to raise the figure to 30 per cent had been voted down.

The form to be taken by the reduction will be decided by the district powers. The attendants, including stenographers, cloakroom and retiring-room attendants and others, may take a cut in wages from $5 to $4 per day, or they may merely work fewer days during the session.

Both houses of the Legislature were organized according to the caucuses held last night, with Senator Walter J. Mitchell elected president of the Senate and T. Barton Harrington chosen speaker of the House. In each case the Republicans offered a candidate, who was promptly voted down, to become his party's floor leader. And in each case the Republicans moved to make election of the presiding officer unanimous.

House Hears Governor.

The main interest today lay in the House of Delegates, the Senate merely organizing, moving to the House chamber to hear the address of the governor, and adjourning until January 10 at 8 p. m.

In the House, however, Albin Owings, jr., was named chairman of the claims committee, the other members to be selected later. The rules committee, to consist of Thomas D'Alesandro, jr., Douglas H. Gordon, Lawrence R. Williams, and Oliver Metzerott, also was selected today by Speaker Harrington. Three new members of the House, Owens S. Jones, of Calvert County; Junius A. Love, of Washington County, and Robert B. Kimble, of Alleghany County, were sworn in to take the seats of three other members who have died since the last session. The House also adjourned to January 10, when committee appointments will have been made.

RITCHIE PROPOSES REDUCTION OF TAX

Balanced Budget by Means of Pay Cut and Financing Revision Outlined.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 4.—A State budget balanced on a tax-rate cut at least 10 cents, without additional forms of taxation, through a 10 per cent pay cut and a rearrangement of State financing methods, was proposed to the Maryland Legislature today by Gov. Albert C. Ritchie as the General Assembly convened for its biennial session.

Although numerous new forms of taxation have been discussed, the budget to be submitted by Gov. Ritchie will be based on the income from present taxes, he said today. The State tax will be reduced from 25 cents to 22 cents, the county school tax will be reduced 7 cents, and $2,492,954 of the gas tax will be applied to county roads.

Reduction in Salaries.

The 10 per cent cut in salaries of public employes is referred to throughout the governor's message as a "contribution," although he called it a pay cut in his speech to the legislators. This "contribution" from the regular employes of the State will be exacted beginning with April, 1933. The cut in the pay of school teachers will be made by lowering the minimum wage 10 per cent, forcing county schools to lower the salaries if they are to share in the equalization fund. The date of starting this cut is left to the individual counties.

Gov. Ritchie points out that he has no power to lower the pay of certain public officers, which is fixed by law. His own salary is included in this classification, but he promises to return to the State one-tenth of his annual $4,500, as well as one-tenth of the $15,000 allowed him for the upkeep of the governor's mansion.

Asks Leaders to Take Cut.

He said: "I ask those who are public officers to accept the 10 per cent contribution as their share of a burden which the present economic condition makes necessary, and which their own employes and subordinates will be required to make."

The 3-cent reduction in the State tax is made possible by using one-half cent of the gas tax to retire road bonds coming due in the next two years. In former years the money, amounting to about $1,100,000 annually, has been used to eliminate grade-crossings, the railroads putting up one-half of the cost. Recently economic conditions have put a stop to the railroads contributing their share of the cost, and the work has ceased. Use of the proceeds from this gas tax for bond retirement reduces by about $800,000 the amount which must be raised by the State tax.

ALEXANDRIA SCHOOL BUDGET IS ADOPTED

Theodore Q. Duggins New Manager of C. & P. Phone Office.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Theodore Q. Duggins, a native of Richmond, has been appointed manager of the Alexandria office of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., according to an announcement made yesterday by Lloyd M. Griffin, general commercial manager. Mr. Duggins succeeds William R. Hiett, who has managed the Alexandria office since last April, and who now goes to Richmond as manager of the office there.

Mr. Duggins has been with the company since 1929, and on March 20 of last year he was appointed chief clerk to the general commercial manager.

Mr. Hiett came to Alexandria from Richmond, where he last occupied the position just vacated by Mr. Duggins. He is a native of West Virginia, and has been employed by the telephone company since 1927.

The annual budget of the Alexandria public schools, which became effective on January 1, and which has been the subject of discussion by the city council, was discussed and finally adopted by the city school board last night at a meeting held in the office of R. C. Bowton, superintendent of schools, presided over by Dr. John T. Ashton, chairman of the board. The budget carries a total of $153,000 for the year.

The auditors who have been examining the books of the Alexandria city officials have practically completed their work, and will submit their report to the city council at its next meeting, January 10. The council at that meeting also will consider the new license ordinance, in which several changes are expected to be made.

Strickland Gillilan, radio entertainer and after-dinner speaker, will present a program at the weekly luncheon of the Alexandria Kiwanis Club today at the George Mason Hotel. He will be presented by J. Randall Caton, who is in charge of the entertainment program.

156 Montgomery Residents Had Flu

Dr. Ellicott Praises Nurse Who Resigned From County Post.

A total of 156 influenza cases was reported to the Montgomery County Health Department at Rockville, Md., the December report of Dr. V. L. Ellicott, county health officer, revealed yesterday. Influenza was the only communicable disease to reach the epidemic stage in December.

There were sixteen pneumonia cases. Other communicable diseases were: Measles, 1; scarlet fever, 6; diphtheria, 4; chicken pox, 8, and tuberculosis, 9.

Dr. Ellicott pays tribute in his report to Miss Ila Z. Moore, public health nurse for the county, whose resignation becomes effective January 20. He says: "Miss Moore's resignation is a great loss to Montgomery County. Her loyalty and perseverance and the high quality of her work have proved a valuable contribution to the welfare of the county." He also cited his efforts in behalf of milk regulations and announces that a branch of the Tuberculosis Association has been formed in the county.

Mt. Rainier Chief Pleads Head Blow

Plumer Denies Being Drunk When Arrested at Hyattsville.

Eugene Plumer, chief of the Mount Rainier police, was suffering from a blow on the head, caused when he slipped and fell into his auto at the time he is alleged to have been drunk and disorderly at the home of E. Morgan Pettit in Hyattsville, he said last night. Plumer was arrested Tuesday night on drunk and assault and battery warrants sworn out by Pettit. He will be tried in Hyattsville police court next Wednesday.

Plumer said that at the time of the alleged offense, which occurred on December 28, he had gone to the house of a friend in Hyattsville. He was not in uniform. Leaving the friend's house, his foot slipped on the running board of the auto, causing his head to strike the steering wheel. He seemed to be uninjured, and got into the car, but was forced to stop the machine a few blocks away when he became semiconscious. He said he remembered no more until he regained consciousness in the custody of Albert Anderson, chief of the Hyattsville police. Plumer suffered an auto accident about a year ago, and has never fully recovered from a fractured skull.

According to Pettit, Plumer came to his house and rattled the knob of the back door, frightening Pettit's wife, Mary. Mrs. Pettit screamed and her husband and son, Alfred, responded. After a scuffle, they said they managed to get Plumer into the back yard, when they called Hyattsville police.

Plummer Freed Under $15,000 Bail

Liquor Hijacking Suspect Is Released From Jail at Baltimore.

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 4.—William Plummer, called by dry officials "the king of the bootleggers in southern Maryland," and alleged dry informer, today was released in $15,000 bail pending a hearing on charges of hijacking four prohibition investigators in Calvert County last September.

Plummer, who was arrested on orders of Simon E. Sobeloff, United States district attorney, following a hearing in the United States District Court last month, has been in jail in default of $20,000 bail awaiting a hearing, originally scheduled for December 29, but postponed until January 13.

Plummer's attorney offered bond of $15,000 yesterday, which was accepted by J. Frank Supplee, United States Commissioner, following a conference in Mr. Sobeloff's office.

ORCHARDIST TALKS AT U. OF MARYLAND

Carpenter Stresses Need of Fruit Growers' Looking Ahead to Prosper.

The fruit grower, more than any other type of agriculturalist, must think of his trees in terms of future investment, G. S. L. Carpenter, of Hancock, Md., declared yesterday in the opening address before the Maryland State Horticultural Society at the University of Maryland, College Park.

Mr. Carpenter emphasized the importance of proper attention to pruning and spraying in the orchard, even during such hard times as the present.

Speaking at the annual banquet of the society last night, Dr. Thomas B. Symonds, director of the University of Maryland Extension Service, declared that the United States was entirely in sympathy with the Argentine government, in requesting inspection of apples shipped from this country. The United States, Dr. Symonds said, was reciprocating by sending representatives to Argentine to assist in the transportation of grapes to this country.

Others on the program at the banquet were Dr. Raymond A. Pearson, president of the University of Maryland, and J. Andrew Cohill, of Hancock.

The meeting will continue today with a session at the Lord Baltimore Hotel, in Baltimore, in conjunction with the Maryland Farm Bureau-Maryland State Agricultural Society. More than 100 fruit growers from all parts of Maryland and several adjoining States had registered yesterday.

Laugh Last

Maryland Lawmakers Get Drop on Panhandler to Profit 50 Cents.

Necessity made sleuths out of two Maryland representatives. The necessity arose out of their desire not to be placed in the same position with the farmer on a visit to town who bought a street car from a stranger.

Representative Ambrose J. Kennedy was in his office when a well-dressed stranger entered and gave him a hard-luck story of how his wallet was stolen. "Could you let me have enough to get back to Baltimore?" he asked.

"Certainly, of course," said the obliging representative. He handed over $1.50.

A few minutes later Representative Kennedy saw Representative William P. Cole, jr., of Towson.

"I just met a man from Baltimore," said Mr. Cole. "He lost his wallet. I gave——"

"That's enough," said Kennedy.

They went on a scouting expedition. They met the stranger near the Senate Office Building.

"My money," demanded Mr. Kennedy. The stranger hastily handed over $1. "His money," said Mr. Kennedy. Mr. Cole was handed $2. The stranger fled.

"I lost 50 cents on the deal," said Mr. Kennedy, "but Cole made a dollar. He gave the man only a dollar in the first place.

PRICES CALLED BASE OF DEBTS PROBLEM

Cornell Man Says Trade Ills Due to Fall in Per Capita Crop Production.

Present economic ills were attributed to a decline in the per capita production of practically all commodities rather than overproduction by Dr. F. A. Pearson, of Cornell University, in an address yesterday before members of the Maryland Extension Service at their seventeenth annual conference.

Pointing to the low prices of corn, Dr. Pearson declared that production of corn per capita has declined more than the production of all crops. The amount of lumber produced in 1932, he stated, was exactly the same as in 1839.

The scientific way to solve the debt problem is by solving the price problem, a superior method to the popular one of bankruptcy, Dr. Pearson asserted. He associated the present price problem with the unequal ratio between gold supply and the supply of other commodities and showed that a relative shortage of gold has been accumulating for about fifteen years. Silver production, he said, follows the production of other commodities much more closely than gold.

Dr. H. J. Patterson, director of the experiment station, declared that Maryland people have followed false trails in marketing the wheat grown in the State and have not recognized the special merits of wheat for making cakes, biscuits and other pastries.

The Tobacco Crop may be Short this Year—— but that can't affect Chesterfield—why?

U. S. crop (average, 5 yrs., 1927-31) .	1,091,265,750 lbs.
Estimated shortage, 1932 crop . .	339,664,750 lbs.

The manufacturer of good cigarettes does not depend on any one year's crop. He knows that to keep up the quality of his brand, he has to carry on hand at all times a large stock of the right kinds of tobacco from several years' crops.

The domestic tobaccos are kept in large hogsheads, each containing about 1000 pounds, and are allowed to age for two full years—in other words, nature's method of curing the tobaccos. Something like ageing wine.

Liggett & Myers has about four and a half miles of warehouses used for storing leaf tobacco, to make sure that its products are uniform and are as good as can be made.

To do this requires a great deal of money—for example, there is invested in the domestic and Turkish tobaccos for Chesterfield Cigarettes over $75,000,000.

Smokers can be assured, regardless of the crop conditions, that Chesterfield will be absolutely uniform—the same yesterday, today, at all times. The cigarette that's milder—the cigarette that tastes better!

WHAT PRICE FARM RELIEF?

No adequate conception of the farm relief measure which the committee on agriculture has reported to the House can be obtained from the analyses of its authors. The full import of this measure probably will not be known until it is put into operation. Its provisions are so far-reaching, so complicated and so highly experimental that it has more the aspect of a farmer's dream than of actual legislation proposed by a congressional committee.

The bill would make the Secretary of Agriculture a czar over the farming industry. He would be required to estimate how much of each crop covered by the plan would be required each year for domestic production. He would decide what is normal production for each area. He would set up machinery to determine whether or not farmers applying for "adjustment certificates" had reduced their acreage by 20 per cent as required by the act. He would decide what crops might be produced on land representing acreage reduction. He would even have to determine the amount of the bounty to be paid producers on that portion of their crops allotted to domestic consumption. In effect he would also fix the tax on the manufacturers of cotton, wheat, tobacco and hog products. His investigation would decide whether the domestic allotment plan should be continued for any crop after the first year. In short, this act would entrust the fate of the farmer to the Secretary of Agriculture and extend to that official greater bureaucratic powers than any member of the Cabinet has ever held.

The reason for placing such extensive discretionary powers upon the Secretary of Agriculture is obvious. Even in its legislative form, the domestic allotment plan is still nebulous. Wherever the committee encountered difficult problems, such as the utilization of land representing acreage reduction, it fell back upon the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture. Perhaps the most difficult problem involved is the determination of whether or not farmers applying for benefits under the act have reduced their acreage by 20 per cent. This is left exclusively in the hands of the secretary.

Among the most glaring defects in the act is its failure to protect hog producers against discrimination because of the tax on the processing of pork. In the case of cotton, a processing tax is also levied on silk and rayon to prevent substitution. But no tax is provided for the processing of beef, mutton, poultry, etc. If the price of hogs is forced up by the allotment plan, other meats will probably be consumed in larger volume, and the plight of hog producers might become even more serious than at present.

Funds raised by the processing tax would be paid into the Treasury. No special fund would be set up for the redemption of the "adjustment certificates," but they would be redeemed by the Treasury whether the special tax could be collected or not. This provision opens the door to another potential deficit. Farmers would be given a siphon into the Treasury.

Members of the committee responsible for this bill recognize it as a "temporary remedy." Representative Jones apologized for its experimental nature by saying that something must be done for the farmer. Apparently it has not occurred to the authors of this measure that they may cripple the farmer instead of helping him. They seem to have agreed upon this form of domestic allotment plan because all other panaceas have either failed or have been laughed out of Congress. That they expect a similar fate for this measure is suggested by its limitation to one crop year.

ITALY AND ALBANIA.

To the growing seriousness of economic problems in the Balkans is added increasing tension in the relations between Italy and Yugoslavia. The efforts of Italy to negotiate a customs union with Albania has caused such apprehension in Yugoslavia that the minister in London has advised the British foreign office that his government views with gravest concern the situation that is being created by Italian policy.

Since 1926 Albania has been subsidized by Italy, and her military organization has been under the supervision and financial control of Rome. So far King Zog has withstood the importunities of the Mussolini cabinet to conclude the customs arrangement. The nations of the little entente look upon it as more political than commercial, since the interchange of Albanian products with Italy is negligible.

The tiny kingdom of Albania, virtually surrounded by Yugoslavia, is looked upon by the Balkan states as a possible military base for Italy if it should be needed, and the proposed customs union as a measure simply to strengthen Italy's position for the extension of political influence. These questions were recently considered by the nations of the little entente at the Belgrade meeting, but the London protest is the first official publicity that has been given to the fears entertained regarding Italy's intentions.

Italy's demand for an economic as well as a military alliance puts King Zog in an embarrassing position. Many Albanians, the king says, particularly the northern mountain tribes, are anti-Italian in their attitude, and would revolt if he should make any closer alliances with Italy.

NON-CIVIL SERVICE JOBS.

Senator McKellar was very modest in offering his resolution, calling upon the Civil Service Commission for a list of all Government jobs not under civil service regulations. "There is going to be a slight change in administration on the 4th day of March," he said, "and we would like to have the information." It remained for Senator Long to expose the ominous aspects in this resolution. "We want whatever jobs are coming to us," he declared. "I do not want that to be lost sight of, because there is great eagerness on the part of deserving Democrats all over the country."

Fortunately, the last word will be spoken by President-elect Roosevelt, who will determine what jobs shall be apportioned among the faithful as patronage. He has announced that the efficiency of the Government service will not be upset by wholesale dismissals. Patronage jobs will, of course, be vacated by Republicans and filled by Democrats. But a large number of positions not protected by civil service do not fall into the patronage class. Included in this group are experts in various fields, attorneys, examiners, etc., many of whom do not owe their appointments to political influence. In the Bureau of Internal Revenue, for example, a considerable number of attorneys are handling difficult taxation cases. They are specially trained for this work, and the Government would be seriously handicapped without their services. Some of these attorneys are Republicans and others are Democrats. It would be inexcusable to oust them in order to give jobs to untrained men.

There will be terrific pressure upon Mr. Roosevelt for the distribution of all available jobs. The list of positions being compiled by the Civil Service Commission should aid the President-elect in deciding which employes ought to be retained for the sake of efficiency.

CHICAGO'S GREAT FAIR.

On June 1 a light ray that started from the star Arcturus 40 years ago, during the Columbian Exposition of 1893, will arrive just in time to shine upon a photo-electric cell and give the impulse that will open the gates of Chicago's Century of Progress Exposition. In the midst of varied difficulties Chicago has not ceased work upon this great undertaking. With its inauguration only five months away, building construction and improvement of the grounds go on apace. The grounds cover 424 acres on the lake front.

From every indication the displays will be more magnificent in many ways than those of the Columbian Exposition or the San Francisco Exposition of 1915. Several of the city's permanent attractions will be included in the grounds, such as the Planetarium, the Field Museum, Soldiers' Field and the Aquarium. Most of the area is already landscaped as part of the park system.

When completed the grounds will accommodate 900,000 persons at one time and the facilities of the plant will enable the handling of an attendance of 1,500,000 a day. This leaves a large margin over the record Chicago Day at the World's Fair, when there was an attendance of 762,000 visitors. During the 150 days that the fair will be open it is expected that it will be visited by no less than 50,000,000 persons. This estimate is based on the experience of most big expositions, which have had an approximately daily attendance equal to 10 per cent of the city's population.

The Century of Progress will be housed in buildings, gay in coloring and startlingly modern, designed by many of the Nation's leading architects, while lighting effects will be under the direction of Joseph Urban, the master of lighting effects for Ziegfeld and the Metropolitan Opera of New York. Nothing that $25,000,000 can provide will be omitted from Chicago's next great fair.

WOOLGATHERING.

Senator Harrison has introduced a resolution calling upon the Senate finance committee to conduct a broad investigation into current economic problems. It is the senator's intention that the "leading minds" of the country be invited to advise Congress as to what steps are essential to economic recovery. The information thus assembled would be used in the formulation of a program to be carried out under the Roosevelt administration.

Another approach to the same objective is made by Senators George and Tydings. They propose the creation of a national planning or stability commission to be made up of experts from industry, business, finance, agriculture, public relations and science, in addition to several members of the Cabinet. It would be the function of this group to advise Congress and the President as to ways and means of emerging from the depression.

Congress is still woolgathering. Instead of concentrating on the urgent problems of setting Uncle Sam's house in order, members of Congress are dreaming of curing hard times with one magnificent gesture. Probably no great industry or business establishment in the whole country is in such desperate financial plight as is the Government. The Treasury ended the last half of 1932 with a deficit of $1,159,286,000. In spite of the higher taxes enacted last spring, expenditures still amount to more than twice as much as the revenue collected. Yet members of the finance committee are planning advisory commissions and a symposium on hard times, instead of formulating revenue legislation.

Economists from all parts of the country have urged upon Congress the necessity of balancing the budget. It is safe to predict that a balanced budget would be objective number one on any list of necessary steps toward recovery that might be compiled as a result of Senator Harrison's proposed inquiry. Every member of Congress knows that. Yet the leaders are proposing commissions instead of taking this obvious first step toward recovery.

Reports from New York that President-elect Roosevelt will urge the Democratic leaders in Congress to foster a budget-balancing plan at this session are most encouraging. All the fancy schemes that might be concocted to stimulate business and industry, all the farm relief measures that may be devised and the economic conferences that may be assembled would be of no avail if the Government's credit should be imperiled. When Congress puts its own house in order, private enterprise will be in a better position to revive. The whole problem of economic recovery hinges upon a courageous readjustment of expenditures and taxes on Capitol Hill. If Congress undertakes such a program in the brief period that remains before March 4, it will have no time for excursions into the theories and panaceas of "leading minds."

AN EFFECTIVE UNIT.

During the discussion in the House of Representatives on the appropriation for the Bureau of Internal Revenue Representative John J. Cochran of Missouri made a stirring appeal for the Intelligence Unit of the bureau, showing that with an expenditure of $626,000 last year it had brought into the Federal Treasury more than $27,000,000. Mr. Cochran expressed the hope that any curtailment of the bureau's funds would not be made to apply to such an efficient branch as the one which is so useful in tracing tax evasions

Rather than suffer any decrease in the activities of the revenue intelligence officers, Mr. Cochran said that testimony before a House committee indicated that if an additional force could be provided to investigate the frauds that have been perpetrated against the Government many more millions could be recovered for the Treasury. This unit, organized in 1919, was originally charged with investigating complaints against employes in the revenue service, and of criminal attempts to avoid taxes. It is now called upon also to investigate charges against attorneys and agents practicing before the bureau as well as offers in compromise of tax liability.

The Intelligence Unit has not only recovered large sums every year, but many undesirable employes have been eliminated from the service through its efforts. This unit has investigated nearly 7,000 tax fraud cases, and for the last six years the known returns to the Treasury for which its activities were responsible have exceeded an average of $30,000,000 a year. Mr. Cochran feels that the internal revenue intelligence force might well be increased to 50 men, in the belief that if given the proper personnel no important tax evader could escape payment of his just dues to the Government.

Tom Blanton isn't invited to confer with the President-elect, but that doesn't prevent him from telling Frank not to call an extra session.

PEN AND SWORD

From the Chicago Tribune.

In Mr. Lloyd Lewis' vivid biography of William Tecumseh Sherman there is recorded an incident worth pondering at a period of our history when something like a psychosis on the subject of war seems to have touched our intelligentsia and even some eminent public men.

"Once," writes Mr. Lewis, "a Dutch immigrant boy, Edward Bok, wrote him [Sherman] a request to send the sentence 'The pen is mightier than the sword' for his autograph collection. Sherman sent the boy a long, stern letter: 'I prefer not to make scraps of sentimental' writing. When I write anything I want it to be real and connected in form, as, for instance, in your quotation from Lord Lytton's play of "Richelieu," the pen is mightier than the sword. Lord Lytton would never have put his signature to so naked a sentiment. Surely I will not. In the text there was a prefix or qualification:

"'Beneath the rule of men entirely great
The pen is mightier than the sword.'"

He told young Bok, says Mr. Lewis, that Washington and Lincoln, who was a master of the pen, had both been fated to resort to "flaming swords."

"No," wrote the old warrior, "I can not subscribe to your sentiment. * * * Rather, in the province of God, there is a time for all things, a time when the sword may cut the Gordian knot and set free the principles of right and justice, bound up in the meshes of hatred, revenge and tyranny that the pens of mighty men like Clay, Webster, Crittenden and Lincoln were unable to disentangle."

Sherman had sent his wisdom to the wrong market. The young Dutch immigrant grew up to be one of the busiest of our pacifists and remained so to the end. Read today, the protest of the great American will as little impress the directors of our policies, for has not war been outlawed? "War," said Sherman on another occasion, "is hell." He knew that from his own experience and liked it no more than any pacifist. But also he knew too much about life to think that the pen of treaty makers can abolish it or their parchment barriers serve a virile nation for its defense.

Hatred of war and its huge waste and demoralization of all values has always marked our national character and policy, but no one who regards the evidence of history will forget that in the greatest crises of the Nation's life it has taken the sword. Nor will they doubt we shall take it again if great issues summon us to the ordeal.

POST HASTE.

In the midst of national and world problems calling for action it is a sad sight to see a great government paralyzed.

If the lame-duck act were already working the new Congress would now be in session. Couldn't the 72d resign in favor of the 73d and save two futile months of uncertainty.

This is the day the boys are going over to the big city to get orders from the new boss. Will there be any rebels who will have to be brought back in chains?

Senate Democrats call for an official list of available spoils. Every little job must be relieved of Republican mortification.

Maybe the inflationists are right about the easiest way to help the 6,000,000 farmers, temporarily, if you can forget about the other 60,000,000.

Uncle Sam's position on the illegal fruits of victory has been made perfectly clear. What a splendid opening the present situation offers for golden silence!

The allotment of an eight-hour day for discussion of the farm relief bill rather ignores the present trend toward the six-hour limit.

Mrs. Roosevelt will write a book before March 4 on "It's Up to the Women." Maybe there's to be more than one woman in the Cabinet.

It will be intriguing to watch whether the Russian bear will continue so complacent if Japan attempts to capture its protege cub, sovietized Mongolia.

Out in the wide open spaces of North Dakota where men are farmers they have elected Minnie Craig, wife of a banker, speaker of the House of Representatives.

If it is germane to the discussion we would just like to suggest that the railroads seemed to be prosperous in the old days when they gave passes to newspapermen.

Why balance the budget? Well, for one thing, try to get a good rate on that $7,000,000,000 which must be refunded this year if it isn't.

German officers are helping run wars by some other name wherever they are found, just keeping in practice, as the French would say.

THE NEED.

And what shall bring success to men?
The will to go to work again,
To bend the back unto the deed
And see once more some human need.

The power to think; the eager mind
That can some useful trinket find
Which will some present lack supply
And other men will gladly buy.

To walk once more with courage stout
The dismal avenues of doubt,
And strive for goals we think afar
Only to learn how near they are.

Dreams and high hopes and, joined with these,
Fatigue instead of pleasant ease;
Faith in ourselves hard ways to plod,
And the eternal faith in God.

Farmers Can Keep Busy by Exchanging Corn Crops, But Can't Make a Profit

By ROBERT QUILLEN

IF your job depends on the correct solution of a problem, isn't it advisable to take some part in finding the solution?

Consider, then, the matter of export trade. It is a complex business, but can be understood if you trace it back to its simple beginnings.

In the beginning, tribes and nations developed foreign trade to dispose of their surplus and obtain things they did not grow or make at home.

When Europe found a sea route to the Orient, wily merchants sent shiploads of trinkets to the heathen; obtained spices, silks and other luxuries in exchange, and sold these imports to the people at home for a great profit.

Cheating the heathen of the East and robbing the heathen of the New World made several nations rich, and thus began the theory that national wealth depends on foreign commerce.

But now all industrial nations produce and sell about the same kind of wares. Their chief concern is not to obtain commodities not produced at home, but to get a profit by selling their manufactured goods.

You are told that prosperity depends on foreign trade, yet you are also told that Europe can not buy American goods unless America buys an equal worth of European goods.

Very well. Suppose Europe sells us $100,000,000 worth of metal products and we then sell her $100,000,000 worth of metal products. What is accomplished? European consumers provide jobs for American workers and American consumers provide jobs for European workers. Railroads and steamships have something to do. The cost of shipping is added to the consumer's cost of living. And that is all.

When America's surplus products are exchanged for coffee, silk, rubber, tin and other needed commodities, that is sane and profitable commerce.

But when Europe sends us shoes or shirts, and undersells our makers because of her low wages and debased currency, in what way are we benefited? Our shoe and shirt makers lose their market; their factories close; their workers are jobless.

America must sell some of her great surplus abroad in order to buy the few things she needs and the many luxuries she desires.

But there is no excuse for importing articles made in America. At best it is swopping dollars; at the worst it is economic suicide.

POLITICAL COMMENT

A Common Arms Objective.

Providence Journal.

It is especially encouraging to learn, on the basis of reports emanating from the conference between President-elect Roosevelt and Mr. Norman H. Davis, the former is in sympathy with the attitude of the Hoover administration toward control of world armaments. The American Government in recent months has advanced certain principles of armament control that are not only sound and constructive but they also have made a genuine appeal to some European nations.

The importance of maintaining continuity of American policy respecting this tremendously vital international problem, despite a necessary change in administrations, can hardly be overestimated. The time appears to be approaching when decisive action of a constructive character can be taken. Mr. Davis himself is reported to have expressed this opinion. Clearly no one is better informed regarding the prospects of agreement by the various powers.

In Brief.

Kansas City Times.

The Coolidge brevity again is illustrated in the former President's letter declining to take part in selection of a chairman for the Massachusetts Republican State committee. Mr. Coolidge replied in 24 words. But, on one occasion at least, Grover Cleveland as President dismissed an important matter in even fewer words. Near the close of his second term, Mr. Cleveland was waited upon by a committee from the Senate and the House who informed him that Congress was about to adjourn and asked if there was any message he would like to communicate to that honorable body. "Congress," said Mr. Cleveland, "can go to hell." But Mr. Coolidge is excusable. He was not dealing with Congress this time.

Pessimist Prediction.

Buffalo Courier-Express.

The House beer bill has about as much chance of passing the Senate as a rabbit has of crawling safely into a hunter's rifle.

Choice of Speaker.

Houston Post.

Three experienced and distinguished members of the House are regarded as the leaders in the race for Speaker in the next Congress, and it is altogether unlikely that Mr. Roosevelt would indicate a preference for any one of them. Organization of the House in the new session properly is the business of the House. The executive and the legislative branches of the Federal Government are separate. Mr. Roosevelt certainly is not going to begin his administration by undertaking to tell the House of Representatives whom it shall elect as its presiding officer.

Always Liquor Smuggling.

Kansas City Star.

Admiral Hamlet, commandant of the Coast Guard, reports an increase of rum-running activities since the November election. He says that legalization of beer will have no effect on smuggling of liquor into the United States and that other countries with government liquor systems, including Canada and Finland, face a problem of smuggling.

The implications of this competent testimony are that enforcement difficulties will be aggravated in the period of attempted change from prohibition, and that after a change is made, whatever its nature, there will remain a big task in enforcement. Whether the whole question be thrown back to the States by outright repeal or a protective measure of Federal control be retained, the expense of enforcement would have to be met unless bootlegging is allowed to run wild.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Too Heavy a Tax on Beer Will Encourage Bootlegging, Diminish Revenue and Create Resentment Among Workers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The eagerness of legislators to put a big tax on beer, in order to remove opposition to legalized beer, is apt to bring about a serious situation later on. Too heavy a tax on beer will encourage bootlegging and diminish the revenues. The workingman may find that legal beer is too costly. I see that it is proposed to legalize beer in the District of Columbia and to impose a tax of $2.50 a barrel, this on top of the $5 Federal tax. That would make beer too costly for the average workingman. The public resentment against an excessive beer tax may play havoc later on.

JACOB STOLFELD.

Government Operations Do Not Take Account of Taxes, Which Private Concerns Pay.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Conservative Democrats will regret to read of President-elect Roosevelt's invitation to Senator Norris to visit Muscle Shoals with him. Everybody already knows that the senator favors Government operation of this property and they know equally well that he would under no circumstances change his oft-repeated views on this question.

In all of the Government owned and operated public utility companies which have been cited by the senator and other advocates of Government ownership and operation, they are exempt from all taxation, which is the largest single expense item which has to be borne by the privately owned and operated companies. In referring to the cheaper rates at which these Government owned and operated companies supply current the advocates never refer to the fact that they pay no taxes.

So far as is known, in not a single instance where a government has owned and operated a public utility has it been able to supply electric power at a lower rate than that charged by the private concern if the tax item paid by the latter is taken into consideration. To the contrary, all investigations so far made indicate that the Government could not produce and sell current at as low a price if taxes are taken into consideration.

A DEMOCRAT.

Charges That Japanese Goods Are Subsidized by Japan, in Order to Capture the American Market.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some of the public men who denounced the tariff as too high during the late campaign are now clamoring for a higher tariff to keep out goods from depreciated-currency countries. These goods are driving American goods from our market. An increase of the tariff on the basis of foreign cost would do no good. The tariff should be based upon valuation in the American market. Some foreign goods could stand an increase of 100 per cent in tariff duties and still undersell American goods.

The incredibly low prices of Japanese goods now dumped in the United States warrant the belief that Japan is subsidizing certain industries for the purpose of capturing the American market. Once American competition has been killed off, Japanese goods could increase their prices and yet hold our market. Japan's commerce is rapidly expanding. She is financing the war in Manchuria with profits made from Americans, who by patronizing Japanese goods are throwing other Americans out of employment. The remedy is not an increase of the tariff, but an embargo against goods that are evidently dumped in here as a result of government subsidies. H. T. YOUNG.

Tariff Reduction Threatened When Foreign Goods Are Flooding American Market.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that the Democrats are going to hold an extra session of Congress to revise the tariff downward, the public will be interested in knowing the plan the Democrats have for stopping the flood of foreign-made goods already throwing men and women out of work in this country.

If you do not believe this country is flooded with foreign-made goods, just look for the almost invisible type hid somewhere on your several Christmas presents; your matchcase; your cigar lighter; your box of matches; your metal pin tray; your metal souvenir of Washington building; your chinaware; your necktie; your cheap rug; your children's toys, paints and brushes; your hat; your shoes; your underwear; your hosiery; your curtains; your pocket knife, nail file, razor, scissors, belt buckle, leather belt, handbag, leather bag, bridge prize, &c.

Cement from Western Europe, electric light bulbs from Japan, crockery from eastern Europe, rubber goods of all kinds from tires to rubber babies, from both Europe and Asia, flood our market. And it proposed to reduce the tariff. GROVER W. AYERS.

Out With Technocracy! People Refuse to Become Cogs in a Machine.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I don't like the implication that we are living under a system of technocracy. It sounds Russian and retrogressive to me. Why not disclaim it at once? This country is still a republic or democracy, as you prefer. It is a land of opportunity and freedom for thinking people. We use machines, but we refuse to become mere cogs in one, without voice or aspirations. We do not want a dictator of any kind, certainly not a spiritless, calculating, mathematical, technical imperator to plan every detail of our lives.

Culbertson on Bridge

SINCE the advent of the new scoring rules for Contract Bridge, a new hero has appeared at the card table. In the past, the central figure at almost any Contract Bridge table was a tournament star, or possibly one of those well-known stars, Mr. East, Mr. West, Mr. North and Mr. South. None of these familiar names are heard any more, because a new and mysterious person has jumped into prominence. This person is already being addressed familiarly by his initials by everyone. I am speaking of "L. H. O."

Who is this "L. H. O." who occupies the role of villain as often as he does the role of hero? He seems to be all-conquering and omnipotent. He has been ruling the Bridge games at the various clubs with an iron hand for the past few weeks and he has the new rules to thank for being exalted to his lofty state. His full name, unless you know it already, is "Left-Hand-Opponent."

His rights under the new rules are many. However, his newest weapon is the power, under certain situations, to call for a new deal. This penalty was not in the old laws, but under the new laws many infractions of the rules are penalized by allowing Mr. "L. H. O." to call for the hand being thrown out, if he chooses.

The most devastating use of this prerogative that I have seen occurred in a game recently. A careful study of the new rules will show that the new penalty for a call out of turn is that instead of partner of the offender merely being barred from the bidding, as has been the case heretofore, our friend, "L. H. O.," now may have the hand thrown in. In short, if the bidding or the lay of the cards does not seem satisfactory to him, if he does not think that his side will be able to emerge from the hand with a plus score, his rights in the matter, once an opponent has offended, allow him to continue playing the hand and ignore the offense or to throw in his cards and the hand is just forgotten.

On this hand, the East-West team had the balance of power. They quickly reached a game in hearts, with North and South, who were not vulnerable, bidding spades defensively. When four hearts was reached, North chose to put in a sacrifice bid of four spades. West very properly bid five hearts, and, after much deliberation, South defended at five spades. The East player, however, would not sell the hand so cheaply, and decided to bid six hearts. After much hesitation North decided that he and his partner had no defense against the Slam contract, and, seeing that they had pushed the opponents into this bid, he decided to go all the way and overbid the Slam. Six spades, of course, was his call. The West player became so excited at this turn of affairs, as he had considered doubling five spades, and knowing that a large set would result, he immediately doubled, even though both East and South had yet to bid before the contracting reached him. North, the drowning man, grasped at the straw, and the straw proved to be a veritable lifeboat.

"For a bid out of turn," he said, "the new laws provide that the left-hand opponent may call for a new deal. Being the left-hand opponent myself, at this point, I hereby declare this hand to be null and void."

East and West could do nothing but assent, and, instead of scoring a vulnerable game or a vulnerable Slam, or at least a 700- or 1,000-point set, had to be content with imagining that the hand had never been dealt at all.

As a matter of fact, even though East and West received quite a blow this rule is just. It is quite conceivable that without West's illegal Double out of turn, East might have had an entirely different idea about the hand. He was the sort of player who insisted on bidding every time it came around to him, and it is quite possible that he would have gambled on bidding and making seven hearts. North and South would possibly have been able to defeat this contract, and, instead of taking a set themselves, they might have secured a small plus on the hand. However, West's double out of turn quite naturally prevented East from making any such decision, and quite justly the laws gave the North-South team, and particularly our friend Mr. "L. H. O.," certain rights in the matter. Of course, it is aside from the point whether East would or would not have bid seven hearts or whether he would have doubled himself. The fact remains that West's unfortunate and excitable Double, without waiting until the bidding came around to him, removed all chance of East making a mistake.

If you were betting on the North-South team, Mr. "L. H. O." was a hero, but if you were an adherent of the East-West pair, "L. H. O." was a villain.

TOMORROW'S HAND.

The bidding and play of the hand printed below will be discussed tomorrow:

THE PARADINE CASE

By ROBERT HICHENS

SYNOPSIS.

Sir Malcolm Keane, one of England's most celebrated advocates, has been briefed by Sir Simon Flaquer, solicitor, to defend his client, Mrs. Paradine, against a charge of murdering her husband, Col. Paradine.

While Mrs. Paradine is in Halloway jail awaiting trial, Lord Horfield is appointed judge of the case.

Sir Malcolm and his pretty wife, Gay, who bears a subtle resemblance to Mrs. Paradine, have been happily married for ten years, but the husband's obsession with the Paradine case is beginning to cast a dark shadow over their happiness. Sir Malcolm finds himself fascinated by the mysterious blonde, whom he passionately desires to save. Subconsciously he is not wholly convinced of her innocence, but he declares emphatically to Sir Simon that he believes her innocent. Sir Simon is skeptical about the defense Sir Malcolm has prepared, which is to suggest that the colonel's servant, William Marsh, who had been Paradine's batman in the war, might have had a hand in the murder. Sir Malcolm is afraid of Lord Horfield, who seems to have a streak of cruelty that manifests itself toward women who come up for trial before him.

Col. Paradine had been blinded in the war and had never seen his beautiful wife, who had been a servant before her marriage. She is a Dane, who had been rescued from a life of degradation by a philanthropic American. After a short period in the United States, she had settled in London to earn her living, and had married the rich Col. Paradine after the war.

Sir Malcolm goes alone to the north of England to look over the Paradine home at Hindley. On his return he invites the Horfields to dinner and the theater, against Gay's wishes. The dinner passes off in a friendly enough spirit. Leaving for the theater Keane takes Lady Horfield in his car and Gay accompanies Lord Horfield, who makes love to her, much to her disgust.

COUNSEL now came to the ugly side of Col. Paradine, shown specially to his wife. It was evident that he wanted evidence from Marsh that would help the crown to establish motive, but did not want to put witness' back up by drawing too black a picture of his adored master. In a less harsh voice than usual he asked:

"Now tell his lordship and the jury, Marsh, was Col. Paradine at times and owing, no doubt, to his affliction difficult in the house?"

For the first time since he had entered the witness box Marsh hesitated obviously.

"Difficult—Sir?" he said at length.

"Yes—was he irritable, impatient, what is often called trying in his domestic life?"

"I have seen the colonel put out, sir."

"With whom?"

"With Mrs. Paradine, sir. She seemed to irritate him."

"She seemed to irritate him!" counsel repeated, looking toward the jury. "And did he express that irritation?"

"Sometimes, sir."

"In what way?"

Again Marsh hesitated.

"The colonel got angry at times, sir. He was an army man, sir."

"We know that. Well?"

"I have heard him swear, sir."

"At whom?"

"At Mrs. Paradine, sir."

Counsel took this up and eventually elicited from Marsh details of quarrels that had taken place between the husband and wife.

It was during this part of the evidence that Keane realized that Marsh was carefully concealing the venomous hatred for Mrs. Paradine shown by him in the inn at Sadale. Certainly Marsh was being unexpectedly mild in his condemnation of the prisoner—if indeed it could be called condemnation. It was obvious that he did not like her and was trying to give the impression that she had disliked him, but nevertheless he seemed anxious not to go too far and even to be scrupulously fair in his evidence. A witness for the crown, but scarcely a really hostile witness.

Sir Joseph Farrell had now come to the attacks of illness which Col. Paradine had had at Hindley Hall. He examined Marsh closely with regard to them. Had Marsh been satisfied that they were normal attacks such as might have been caused by acute dyspepsia, or had he had any suspicion that they were abnormal and that the diagnoses of the Cumberland doctors were at fault? Marsh replied that he couldn't understand why his master had these seizures. He had never known him to be subject to indigestion. The numbness felt by the colonel had specially troubled him. But he had taken the doctor's word that the symptoms were such as might have been due to severe dyspepsia and had never had any suspicion that any one had had a hand in the colonel's illness.

"And—now?" asked Sir Joseph Farrell significantly.

Marsh looked at him, then looked down.

"Now, I couldn't say as to that, sir," he replied in a low, deep voice that had become suddenly dull.

And a heavy expression lowered over his powerful face.

After dealing with the physical symptoms of the two attacks of illness and the impression made upon William Marsh by them, counsel questioned witness as to the conduct of the prisoner at the times of the illnesses.

"Did Mrs. Paradine seem upset when her husband was ill?" he asked.

"Not specially, sir."

"Tell us what exactly you mean by that."

"Mrs. Paradine was a lady as didn't show much, as a rule. She was very shut in," said the witness.

"But did she or not express herself as anxious about her husband's condition?"

"O, yes, sir. She said the usual things."

"And what were they?"

"That she hoped he'd soon be better, that he must be more careful what he ate—that sort of thing, sir."

"And did she seem troubled?"

"No, sir; not specially. But she did say the country doctors were fools."

A faint sound of laughter went through the court. Lord Horfield took no notice of it.

"Soon after this did she suggest a change of any kind?"

"Yes, sir. She wanted us to go to London."

"Did that suggestion come from the colonel or from her?"

"From Mrs. Paradine, sir. She thought the colonel had better have a change and see a London doctor."

"Are you sure the suggestion of his seeing a London doctor came from her?"

"Yes, sir. I heard her myself say that in London they could have a real examination and see if anything was the matter with the colonel."

* * * * * * *

The examination was then transferred to the events in London. Marsh described the sort of life led by his master and mistress there as far as it was observed by him. It was no better, according to him, than it had been in Hindley. In London he seemed to realize with much greater bitterness all that he was missing. His nerves, Marsh affirmed, were "all to pieces." But his physical health seemed good. So things were on the day when a crisis arrived in the lives of these people.

"Tell his lordship and the jury what happened on that evening when you were summoned to Col. Paradine's study, the evening of the night on which he died," said counsel.

"I heard the colonel's bell ringing violently and then his voice calling out for me, sir. And I hurried to go to him. I knew there was something up."

"How did you know that?"

"I heard voices from the room, sir. The colonel was almost shouting like."

"Did you hear Mrs. Paradine's voice before you went to the room?"

"Yes, sir; but less than his. I heard her just as I was coming to the room."

"Well, you went to the room. And what happened then?"

"The colonel and the lady were both on their feet. The lady was standing, but the colonel was going up and down, as was his way sometimes, knocking here and there against bits of furniture. He was, as you might say, new to the house, sir. It wasn't like it was at Hindley Hall, where he knew exactly where everything was."

"Naturally. And your mistress? The prisoner?"

"She just stood where she was, sir."

"What did you do?"

"I shut the door behind me. I didn't want the others to hear, and they might be curious."

"So you shut the door. And then what did you do?"

"When I came into the room and the door was shut I told the colonel I was there. He was so excited I didn't know whether he had heard me come in. And not being able to see me he mightn't know. When I told him he burst out with it."

Again Marsh paused.

"Well?" said counsel encouragingly. "Tell us."

"He said that the lady——"

"Mrs. Paradine?"

"Yes, sir. That Mrs. Paradine had give me away to him."

Keane made a violent movement, then sat still, leaning forward.

"What d'you mean given you away?"

"He said that she'd told him I meant to leave him, get out of his service and look out for another job."

Keane's attitude changed. His whole body seemed to relax.

"And was that the reason of his anger?"

"He was angry at my having said such a thing to the lady behind his back, instead of coming to him with it. That I should go to her. That was what got him."

"But had you gone to the prisoner with any such statement?"

"Of course not, sir. And so I told the colonel. But he wouldn't believe me."

"You gave the lie to the prisoner?"

"I did, sir. And I'd give it again," said Marsh in a loud voice.

Judith bent to Gay.

"It's extraordinary! Even now he doesn't look at her," she whispered.

Gay answered nothing. She was absorbed in the case.

"So Col. Paradine wouldn't believe you?"

"No, sir. He was fair out of himself. I never seen him in such a state before, though I'd often seen him angry. But never with me like that. That I should go back on him, that did go home."

As Marsh gave this evidence it became obvious that his hitherto stern self-control was beginning to wear thin.

"Didn't you continue to deny it?"

"Of course, I did. But he was fair away and nothing would stop him. You might as well have talked into a thunderstorm."

"Did Mrs. Paradine take no part in this scene?" said the judge.

"Tell us what her attitude was, please," added counsel.

"The lady just stood there and looked as blank as a sheet of paper," said Marsh, with sudden fierceness.

"But when you denied it?"

"She didn't back me up, not she! Why should she? She was a woman."

Marsh's hatred of women was now coming out of him like flame out of a fire hitherto nearly black and quiescent.

"Did you ask her to join you in your denial?"

"No, sir. What would have been the good when it was she who'd put the whole thing into the colonel's head?"

"And the whole brunt fell on you, did it?"

"No, sir. The colonel was furious with both of us, with me for telling the lady, as he thought, and with her for listening to me behind his back. He put us both down as treacherous to him."

"And so the whole scene that took place was based on his belief that you meant to get out of his service and had told the prisoner so without telling him?"

"That was it, sir."

"And you say there was no truth in this?"

"No truth at all, sir. I would never have left my colonel."

"Can you give his lordship and the jury any reason why the prisoner should have made such an assertion about you when it was entirely untrue?"

Marsh thrust out his square chin defiantly.

"I think the lady wanted to get me out of my situation," he said.

"Why?"

Keane at this moment stared steadfastly toward the dock.

"She didn't care for my being so much with the colonel."

"Do you mean that you think she was jealous of your position of confidence in the household?"

"Yes, sir."

"Anything else?"

"She may have had other reasons," Marsh said slowly.

"What other reasons do you suggest?"

"Well, sir, I think she wanted me out of the house. Otherwise why tell such a lie about me?"

"So," said counsel, looking straight at the jury box, "the impression you had was that she had her reasons for getting you out of the house and so told the colonel a lie about you?"

"Yes, sir."

"And beyond jealousy of your influence with the colonel and his trust and confidence in you, you can suggest no other specific reason for the prisoner's wishing to get you out of Col. Paradine's household?"

Marsh obviously hesitated. Finally he said in a low voice:

"It's difficult to know what a woman's reason is, sir. I think I'll leave it there."

Counsel again looked at the jury.

"Very well—then we'll pass away from that."

He bent down, fidgeted rather elaborately with some papers in front of him, and whispered a word or two to his junior, who whispered something back. Then, lifting himself up abruptly, he said:

"Did the prisoner take no part whatever in this scene?"

"O, yes, sir. After a bit she did all she could to smooth the colonel down, but it was no good. We couldn't do anything with him."

"But when you denied the truth of what she had said to her husband?"

"She swore it was true."

"And did the colonel believe her?"

"He went for me, sir, and her too. He was out of himself."

"What d'you mean by that?"

"He seemed almost demented with it. Poor colonel!"

The way in which Marsh said the last words made a deep impression on the court. They came in a sort of groan from the man's heart it seemed.

"That's truth enough, if all the rest is lies!" Judith whispered to Gay.

Interpreting the Mode

By DARE

TODAY is Face Day!

Yes, we celebrate faces today—the faces of the world, and especially one's own face. By spending a quiet fifteen minutes before the mirror, looking at our face first with one eye shut, then with the other shut, and next with a magnifying glass—and then through the eyes of our friends, and last and certainly first—through the eyes of our enemies.

What face do we see? First, what shape is it—is it round, or long, or square? Then, what defects do we see—a poorly kept complexion, or a badly chosen coiffeur, or straggly eyebrows—or worse, eyebrows plucked to give a line that is not flattering to our features?

The complexious and coiffure aids we will discuss another day, but the shape of that face needs attention right away. Let's start with round faces, whether this means chubby or even fat, or just round, "moon face" with nothing but an excuse for a profile! One of the most famous beauties of the screen has such a face—and by making the best of it and never, never showing her profile—no one knows it save herself and the director!

Well, Mme. Round Face is sketched for you today. Yes, for times—the same face, traced. And yet it looks like a different one, doesn't it? Because the fatty at the upper left has all the wrong kinds of lines in her hat and coiffeur and neckline—round ones, shortening ones, lines that make her look squatty and toad-like, lines that broaden that face, and cut her off and down, that choke her up—in short, lines that give so little highlight to her picture—the highlight of a painting being the flesh—that she simply doesn't do a thing but unflatter herself right and left, up and down. Look at the same face at the upper right! Here Mme. Chubby face has lengthened the highlight of her picture so much that we no longer consider her a chubby face at all! She has achieved this by showing all of her forehead, and more of her neck with the V and rather low neckline of her frock. Further adding to her height and thereby making her face seem even more slender, she has added braids to her coiffeur, and oblong earrings. In this latter, the woman with a round face and short neck can only wear longish earrings if her neck is long enough to permit her to do so—earrings that are too long for her neck will only call attention to its shortness, remember. Mme. Upper Right's necklace is likewise correctly chosen to slenderize her face, and, her eyebrows are plucked in a way to straighten out their half-moon curves—a point of beauty in any but a round face.

There in the lower right is Mme. Moon Face, with half-moon eyebrows, which make her face even rounder; with a coiffeur which she no doubt thinks cunning, but which cuts off her face and rounds it out bee-utifully at each side; with a choker bead necklace which destroys any semblance of a neck she might have, further rounding her face, as does the round and too high neckline she has chosen. But this is the same face as the one above it, remember!

If you are one of these charming ladies—do something about it right away! If your face isn't round—watch for suggestions for you some other day!

Maybe you think you aren't interested in tea aprons—but I'll bet if you had a couple of really chic ones you would find more uses for them! How about making one from two of his handkerchiefs—and wearing it when he comes to dinner and you serve the biscuits you made—or the fried chicken? This week's illustrated leaflet tells you how to make this and several other nice little tea aprons—for yourself or for gifts, for clever finger work and spare finger time. Better send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for it, yes? Send to the Dare Department of The Post and you will have the leaflet pronto.

How to Be Beautiful

By ELSIE PIERCE

TREATMENT for the healthy head of hair is even simpler than the regime for the perfectly normal, healthy skin. Tonics, pomades, specially prepared oil, are very beneficial and helpful to the scalp that really needs them. I have myself seen scalps cleared of dandruff with the aid of massage and ointments. I have seen oily scalps normalized with the aid of tonics, and dry scalp and hair nourished with the help of oils.

But the scalp that has just enough oils in it, the hair that is abundant, glossy, pliable—all that this type of head needs is proper cleansing and a little daily massage to keep the circulation stimulated.

Brshing.

A few minutes' brushing night and morning is fine, if you are still a member of the old order of the brush. But with permament waving, brushing has become less and less popular. Women feel that brushing disarranges the hair too readily. If you don't brush daily, let me urge you to do so before the shampoo and wave setting, at least. The brushing will stimulate the circulation through the scalp, and help to clear it of surface dust that threatens to become imbedded. Also, it will distribute the oil evenly through every strand of hair from the roots at the scalp down to the ends.

If you have discontinued brushing your hair the 100 strokes every night, all the more reason why you should massage your scalp, because the scalp needs this stimulation. Bend your head forward and let the hair hang over. Start at the nape of the neck and massage in a rotary direction, first to the right, then to the left, for a few minutes, feeling the scalp move like a loose cap. Move upward until you reach the crown of the head. Then comb and set the hair in place, so there will be no tangles.

Shampooing.

The average healthy head of hair does not need shampooing oftener than every ten days, or once every two weeks. Shampoo with a good, mild soap, and be sure to rinse thoroughly. While the hair is damp set it into waves, arranging it exactly as you wish it to look when dry. Put a net over it and allow it to dry naturally. If you allow the hair to dry before setting it will only be necessary to moisten again with water or wave setting lotion. The hair is more pliable when damp.

Every day, spray with a little water or brilliantine, pinch waves into place, put hair net and cloth over hair while dressing, and you'll find that this treatment will prolong the life of a wave.

If you have any special hair problems, do write me and I will send you bulletins, or personal advice if you need it.

What Today Means

"CAPRICORN."

IF JANUARY 5 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7 a. m. to 8:45 a. m., from 1 p. m. to 2:10 p. m., and from 4:30 p. m. to 5:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 10 a. m. to 11:15 a. m., and from 7 p. m. to 8:30 p. m.

Influences would seem to make extreme inactivity in the business world on this date. Events and affairs in the social world, however, will move at a fast pace and will attain a high degree of hilarity and gayety. Weddings occurring on this date would seem to afford a good start to the wedded ones. News of a disconcerting nature may come from afar.

The child born on this January 5 will be inclined to be a cry-baby and whiner. See that he overgrows this. The child will be extremely selfish and self-centered. It will have many petty ways, some of them very annoying. The child will, in all probability, have a splendid mind. Taught to think properly and along right channels, the youngster should have a fine future ahead.

If your birthday is on January 5 you have much to be grateful for. Without being markedly strong-willed, you will all through life invariably get your own way. This is true, regardless of the rightness or wrongness of your desires, so you must concentrate on developing a wise and sane outlook on life, or you shall find your desires leading you into severe difficulties. You have a fairly good sense of values, but you must constantly strive to perfect it. You are highly intuitive. Often you surprise your friends by sensing their thoughts and wants, even before they themselves have consciously become aware of them. You are a naturally good person, and you know how to bring good into the lives of others.

Born on January 5, you should marry young. Your greatest spiritual and mental development will come from having a congenial mate at your side to work and grow and expand in thought with you. Do not listen too much to the counsel of others. You are a better judge by far of your own problems than any one else could be. This does not mean that you should not profit from the experiences of other people. Do not let reverses of any sort slow you up—keep fighting and striving, for it is a good fight, worth fighting, and you will succeed.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

THE suggestion has been made that nettle rash, urticaria, giant hives and possibly to some extent migraine and asthma can be prevented. The suggestion applies to all those allergy diseases the cause of which lies in the digestive tract and the organs of elimination. It is that a rather small dose of mineral oil be taken with each meal or, if one knows or even strongly suspects the foods that cause the trouble, that it be taken with meals whenever any of the foods under suspicion are eaten. It can be omitted when the meal consists wholly of foods known to be incapable of causing the allergy symptoms.

The amount taken is small, ranging from one teaspoonful to a tablespoonful. It is best to take it in two portions, one-half just before the meal and the other at its conclusion. Probably it would be better still to take it with the meal as, for instance, a mayonnaise or salad dressing. Another method would be to chill it almost to the freezing point of water and serve it with orange juice, lemon juice, or emulsified with milk, as in a nice cream or a milk shake.

The suggestion comes from a Paris hospital, where Drs. C. Richet, jr., and R. Conder report that they have used it with success after having tried it on lower animals. The objective is not to get the laxative action of mineral oil or to treat constipation. It is to delay its assimilation. Their theory is that the food allergy or sensitization diseases that originate in the digestive and assimilative apparatus are caused by the absorption of foods that are not ready for use.

Food is first digested or converted into products that are on the way to being fit for use. The next step is the absorption of these early-step products. Then the other organs of assimilation, and particularly the liver, take these half-way products and make them into materials that the tissue can use. In urticaria and its kinsmen these half-way products rush by the liver and land in the blood stream en route to the tissue cells. They are not in a shape to serve as food and, in fact, they poison certain of these cells, hence the nettle rash.

Drs. Richet and Conder wanted to put a brake or drag on digestion and absorption. It is known that when fats are added to a meal they slow up digestion and probably absorption somewhat. As a rule, this does no particular harm. In the case of the food allergy diseases they thought it would do good.

In experiments on guinea pigs they proved that when mineral oil was put in the stomach with food it spread over the wall, was incorporated with the food, and delayed digestion and absorption. If we could find something that would help the liver do its job that should be a better remedy than mineral oil for the food allergy diseases.

HEART TROUBLE.

E. B. S. writes: At the age of 15 I had an attack of rheumatism and have had a double heart murmur ever since. Going to business daily I have some steep subway stair climbing to do. Is this injurious, and does it tend to weaken the heart more? While I don't have spells of any kind, the only time I am bothered is in climbing stairs, when it is hard for me to catch my breath. I am 30 years of age. Is my ailment a dangerous one, and would it be dangerous for me to have children? Is it all right for me to do bending exercises?

Reply.

You appear to have a chronic organic heart disease of rheumatic origin. Your compensation appears to be good. As a rule persons with heart disorders of this combination should climb stairs, do bending exercises, take long walks and, in other ways, maintain good muscle tone.

Your compensation is almost but not altogether equal to the strain of stair climbing. Your physician should be the judge of how much work your compensation will permit of.

Radio Dial Flashes

By ROBERT D. HEINL

REPRESENTATIVE LOUIS LUDLOW, of Indiana, is losing no time in his efforts to assist police officials of the country who are trying to make it more difficult for crooks to intercept police radio broadcasts. A bill which Mr. Ludlow introduced has been redrafted and will soon be reintroduced.

It will provide that anyone having a short-wave set in his car capable of picking up police broadcasts must have a permit issued by the United States district attorney. It would be necessary to have a short-wave set permit under this law just as a permit to carry a gun is required in many places. The penalty for having a short-wave set in an automobile, thereafter, would be $5,000 fine or five years' imprisonment, or both fine and imprisonment.

As soon as the police radio bill has been reintroduced Mr. Ludlow will endeavor to have Representative Ewin Davis, of Tennessee, chairman of the merchant marine and radio committee, hold hearings on it at which time there will be an opportunity for police officials to be heard. Because of the urgency of the measure Mr. Ludlow purposes to push it as hard as he can regardless of the legislative congestion of the short session.

If such a bill as Mr. Ludlow will introduce passes, which it undoubtedly will, there is no question but that it will be followed later by an amendment having to do with short-wave sets in the homes. If crooks are penalized for having sets in their cars they will quickly transfer the scene of their operations to their houses. In fact, a good many are already supposed to be used by bootleggers and others who listen to police broadcasts at home and flash the information to confederates by telephone.

Detecting the presence of a short-wave set in a home would be a difficult matter, but it has been suggested to Representative Ludlow that manufacturers and dealers be required to account for their sales—or not be allowed to sell short-wave sets to anyone who is unable to show a Federal permit authorizing him to have one.

Although nothing has been said about it, the Radio Corporation of America, for instance, has been very reluctant to sell short-wave sets for the purpose of purely receiving police broadcasts. An instance is known of a person who tried to get a short-wave set from the Radio Corporation to pick up police broadcasts and was turned down, the R. C. A. official in question stating that the corporation desired to cooperate with the police in the matter of trying to keep the broadcasts as secret as possible.

Of course it is always possible for crooks to have short-wave sets built or even build them themselves, but it is believed with such tightening up as Representative Ludlow and others have in mind the situation may be materially improved.

LOUIS W. HILL waits until everybody else has sent the season's greetings and then along about this time sends his. Mr. Hill is an artist in his own right and would have most certainly made a name for himself in the world of art if he hadn't inherited three or four railroads and been burdened with the care of as many millions of dollars.

However, far from being discouraged he continues to send his holiday cards to old friends. They are hand painted and always personally signed. The 1933 card, almost a foot square, shows a new chalet Mr. Hill has just built at North Oaks Farm, his country home near St. Paul. It is a beautiful snow scene, with a sleigh in the foreground, shows brightly dressed Minnesotans, and as is invariably the case when Louis is around, everybody appears to be having the time of their lives.

The prize incident having to do with the visit of the radio stars in Washington was the fate of the popularity contest gold cup awarded to Rudy Vallee. After it had been presented to him in behalf of Arthur T. Murray, of the American Bosch Corporation, by Vice President Curtis, Vallee very carefully took it with him to the Willard Hotel.

Following the Press Club party, Don Craig, jr., radio scribe, went over for a little chat with Vallee, who, in the meantime, had gone to the White House. Don decided to wait for him, but in sitting down—horror of horrors—he sat down on Rudy's gold cup, crumpling it all out of line.

"Oh, Don, look what you have done!" exclaimed a feminine newspaper writer who was present.

"Woman, your eyes deceive you," young Craig retorted in a heroic attempt to hide his embarrassment.

A SCENE from the Eugene O'Neil play, "The Emperor Jones," will be presented during Rudy's program at 8 o'clock tonight, two days ahead of the world premiere of the operatic version of the play at the Metropolitan Opera House. Lawrence Tibbett will be starred in the latter performance, which will be broadcast by Station WRC.

Gems from the Gilbert and Sullivan comic opera, "Pinafore," sung by Wilbur Evans, barytone; Nevada Vandervere, contralto, and Earle Spicer, barytone; Greta Keller, Viennese blues singer, and Burns and Allen and Shaw and Lee, comedy teams, will complete the guest features of the broadcast tonight over WRC. Vallee will direct his Connecticut Yankees as usual.

The cruise of Capt. Henry's Show Boat will be continued for another thirteen weeks, beginning tonight (WRC, 9 o'clock). Nelson Eddy, operatic barytone, will be the first guest to be entertained aboard under the new guest artist policy.

Jules Bledsoe, colored barytone, and the Hall Johnson Choir will no longer be members of the troupe. The rest of the air show will continue to include Charles Winninger (Capt. Henry), Lanny Ross, Muriel Wilson (Mary Lou), Annette Hanshaw, Molasses 'n' January and Don Voorhees' Show Boat Band.

CHILDE HASSAM, American artist, will be introduced to WRC's audience at 2:45 o'clock this afternoon. Hassam will give his reactions to art, art dealers, critics and shows. This is one of Francis G. Healey's series broadcast weekly over the WJZ network from the New York studios, which has been changed to a WEAF network feature with the New Year.

Old Home Week will be celebrated on the "Hollywood-on-the-Air" program at 12:30 o'clock a. m. Leo Robins and Ralph Rainger, cocomposers of "Here Lies Love" and "Please," will play and sing some of their compositions, including the numbers they wrote for Marlene Deitrich's "Blonde Venus."

The Aborn Opera Co. will present a radio version of Victor Herbert's "Mlle. Modiste" in the Five Star Theater program at 10 o'clock tonight over WJSV. Vivian Hart will sing the leading role.

JACK PEARL (Baron Munchausen), as director-in-chief of the affiliated Baron Munchausen Clubs of North America, announces the decision of the executive board to adopt a full grown dachshund as the official mascot of that organization. The selection was determined, he said, by the need for a subject which, like club members, covered the most ground before reaching the end of its tale.

VALLIN AND CROOKS SING AT MAYFLOWER

Mme. Ninon Vallin, soprano of the Paris Grand Opera, and Richard Crooks, tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, were costars at Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's sixty-fourth musical morning at the Hotel Mayflower yesterday.

It was Mme. Vallin's Washington debut. She has been heralded as an outstanding soprano and prima donna who had won many laurels in her European career. This opinion was fully justified by yesterday's appearance of the talented Frenchwoman. In her several operatic duets with Mr. Crooks she adequately sustained her role both vocally and histrionically. The audience was particularly appreciative of her singing of a group of songs by her countrymen, Debussy and Gabriel Faure. In her rendition of the familiar aria, "Depuis le Jour," other beauties of her voice were apparent.

Washington music lovers cherish a real affection for Mr. Crooks and demonstrated this again yesterday in their reception of this golden voiced tenor who has risen so high in the operatic world. Mr. Crooks' mellow tones blended excellently with those of Mme. Vallin in the letter duet from Massenet's "Manon," and the "Parles-moi de ma mere" duet from Bizet's popular "Carmen."

Among the songs and ballads of his portion of the program attracting special applause were Handel's "Where'er You Walk" and "Into the Light" and "Retreat" both by La Forge. His operatic prowess was shown again in his singing of the Aria "Le-Reve" from "Manon."

The soloist at Mrs. Townsend's musical morning next Wednesday at the Mayflower will be Mme. Conchita Supervia, contralto-coloratura of Madrid, Paris and London opera, and Alberto Salvi, eminent harpist.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

CATHARINE OF ARAGON, daughter of the Spanish Ferdinand and Isabella; Anne Boleyn, English noblewoman from the court of Francis I; Jane Seymour, the diffident child of a simple ruralist of noble birth; Anne of Cleves, "The Flanders Mare;" Katheryn Howard, first cousin of Anne Boleyn, and Katherine Parr, twice a widow, comprising "The Wives of Henry VIII," as revivified by that gracious and versatile artiste, Miss Cornelia Otis Skinner, again walked the boards of the National Theater at yesterday's matinee performance, to the keen enjoyment of an enthusiastic audience generous in both numbers and appreciation.

Cornelia Otis Skinner

Since this is the most extensive, as well as the most deftly diversified, gallery of portraitures Miss Skinner brings to the Capital, it is, perhaps, to be regretted that only one more audience—that of tomorrow night—will be privileged to revel in its richness of coloring, incisive humor and authentic and arresting characterization.

It has always seemed to this column that Miss Skinner reveals the fullest flower of her art—the most appealing beauty, the most engaging variety and the most facile touch—in her vivid etchings of Catharine of Aragon, imperious princess of the Spanish court; Jane Seymour, the young, frightened and shrinking mother of King Henry VIII's only son, and Katherine Parr, the last and probably most capable of the many wives of merry old King Hal, whose matrimonial whimsies ranged from mad adoration to the cool decapitation of his numerous helpmeets. Anne of Cleves, affords Miss Skinner play for her considerable endowments as a comedienne.

While both of these more pretentious "Dramatic Sequences"—"The Wives of Henry VIII" and "The Empress Eugenie"—constituting the second half of each of Miss Skinner's bills, approach nearen to the conventional theater than her shorter "Character Sketches," it is from among these latter that one is able to pluck some of the most delightful moments of the week's engagement.

Yesterday afternoon's curtain raisers, five in number, included "In a Gondola" and "A Lady Explorer" from last season's brief engagement, as well as "The Eve of Departure," "In a Telephone Booth" and "Sailing Time."

It can not, I think, be too strongly emphasized that an evening with Miss Skinner is a fascinating experience in the theater.

Years of close professional association with the fellow, not to mention longer years of intimate familiarity with his extra-judicial adherence to the letter of the law, his unswerving allegiance to the most stringent of the statutes and the chill austerity of his rock-ribbed and unbending Puritanism, cause me to shudder at the stark contemplation of the ghastly doom that awaits the criminal element of the National Capital now that Old Capt. Frank P. Morse, skipper of the S. S. Frantic, has been made Foreman of the Grand Jury sitting in the District for the next 90 days!

No overtime parker may longer thumb his nose at the sanctity of the law; no paper in the gutter clutter-upper boast immunity from punishment.

With Old Francois Phillipe the Foreman of the District Grand Jury, the hand of the law has become a mailed fist. And how!

It's all a little disquieting, because it just goes to show what a dramatic editor can come to, if you just give him time! Or he gives you time. Or something.

From the executive offices of Warner Brothers in this city comes word that "20,000 Years in Sing Sing," the sensational new film cofeaturing Spencer Tracy and Bette Davis, which will be given its public world premiere at the Metropolitan tomorrow, will be shown to officials of the U. S. Bureau of Prisons at a special screening in the Ambassador Theater this afternoon at 4.

The invitation committee for this special presentation of the film adapted from the book by Warden Lewis E. Lawes, of Sing Sing, is made up of the following: Sanford Bates, director United States Bureau of Prisons; Dr. George S. Wilson, secretary Board of Public Welfare; Dr. Walter L. Treadway, Assistant Surgeon General; Dr. H. C. Wooley, M. M. Barnard, superintendent United States penal institutions; James V. Bennett, assistant director United States Bureau Prisons; Austin H. MacCormick, assistant director United States Bureau Prisons; Arthur D. Woods and Nugent Dodd, Assistant Attorney General.

Speaking of incoming attractions, announcement is made by Mrs. Wilson-Greene that the concert scheduled for Wednesday afternoon, January 11, at Constitution Hall, with Lily Pons, coloratura soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, as the artiste, has been postponed owing to the illness of Miss Pons. Although no date has as yet been set, it is the understanding that Pons will appear here later in the season and that tickets for next Wednesday's concert will be good at that time.

And another thing. Having broken a few attendance and money records, as well as having won the unstinted praise of all who have seen it, "The Animal Kingdom," starring Leslie Howard and Ann Harding, supported by Myrna Loy, William Gargan, Henry Stephenson, Ilka Chase and numerous others, at RKO-Keith's, has been reprieved from banishment and will be continued as the attraction on Fifteenth street through next Thursday.

Friday, January 13, is definitely stated to be the opening date of the local engagement of Columbia Pictures' filmization of Mrs. Grace Zaring Stone's novel of "The Bitter Tea of General Yen," in which the principal roles are taken by Barbara Stanwyck and Nils Asther, with the accent on Nils Asther.

If it is this week-end you are concerned about, don't forget that Escudero, the Spanish exponent of gypsy dancing, assisted by Carmita and Carmela and an instrumental duo, will appear in the National Theater tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 o'clock as the third attraction in Mrs. Wilson-Greene's Philharmonic concert series.

Also it should be borne in mind that Tony Sarg's Marionettes will hold forth both Saturday morning and afternoon in the Masonic Auditorium, under the sponsorship of the T. Arthur Smith Concert Bureau. Mr. Sarg has built this year's entertainment about the stories of Sinbad the Sailor, from the Arabian Nights.

The motion picture houses beckon you to the new week with the following enticements: Loew's Fox, Sari Maritza and Herbert Marshall in "Evenings for Sale," and the Great Nicola headlining the vaudeville; Earle, Edmund Lowe and Wynne Gibson in "The Devil Is Driving," and Bernice Claire and Alexander Gray headlining the vaudeville in person; Metropolitan, Spencer Tracy and Bette Davis in "20,000 Years in Sing Sing;" Rialto, "Slim" Summerville and ZaSu Pitts in "They Just Had to Get Married," opening tomorrow midnight; Columbia, Bela Lugosi in "The Death Kiss;" RKO-Keith's, Leslie Howard and Ann Harding a second week in "The Animal Kingdom;" Palace, Norma Shearer and Clark Gable in "Strange Interlude," second week.

Offering the features in the regular cinema houses more than ordinarily keen competition, Cecil B. De Mille's spectacular production of the famous old Wilson Barrett play, "The Sign of the Cross," will be presented as a road show attraction at the National for the eight days beginning Sunday, January 8, and extending through Sunday, January 15.

In this Christian epic of pomp, pageantry and martyrdom, the principal roles are played by Claudette Colbert, Fredric March, Elissa Landi and Charles Laughton, supported by an ensemble of thousands.

"The Sign of the Cross" will be projected twice daily, at 2:30 and 8:30 p. m., with Sunday's matinee performances beginning at 3 and Friday's matinee at 1.

Always something to worry about!

Effective immediately, the company will inaugurate a through express service from Washington to Los Angeles. The company announced that the time to Los Angeles will be 4½ days—by far the fastest bus service ever offered.

NEW M'COIN CLEW FOUND IN MARYLAND

Bloody Handkerchief Picked Up in Mountains Near Indian Springs.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Hunt for the body of R. S. McCoin, missing North Carolina attorney, was renewed today as E. B. Linthicum, nephew of McCoin, led a group of farmers into the mountains near Indian Springs, 15 miles west of here, where a bloodstained handkerchief was found by a youth.

The handkerchief was being examined by a local chemist to whom it had been given by the State police for an analysis.

Merle Garmong, Indian Springs youth, brought a handkerchief to State police here yesterday, saying he found it near the ashes of a camp fire.

Garmong said he saw an automobile, which he described as similar to the one owned by McCoin when the attorney disappeared shortly before Christmas, parked on a mountainside road more than a week ago and a camp fire in the woods.

Yesterday he went to the place to look over the scene. Near the ashes of the fire he found the handkerchief, stained with blood.

For more than a week the search for McCoin's body has been carried on along the National pike to the west of Hagerstown. An anonymous letter from a "boy in distress" to a North Carolina judge said the body, after McCoin had been killed in Virginia, had been buried near Hagerstown.

GEORGE WASHINGTON DEFEATS N. C. STATE, 34-29

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

THE consensus of opinion among baseball fans, which sometimes is about as dependable as a Manchurian treaty, grants that the Washington club was the chief beneficiary in last month's series of trades, but only Alvin Crowder has dared to predict a pennant for the Nats.

Down in Winston-Salem, N. C., where Crowder is a big restaurant man in the off-season—I don't mean dealing 'em off the arm to keep his pitching wing in shape, but as the successful proprietor of a chain of cafes—the right-handed ace of the Nats' pitching staff has gone on record with the assertion that he thinks the Washington club can beat out the Yankees next season.

Goslin and Schulte will bring the Nats the needed hitting strength and Whitehill and Stewart will provide added pitching power, Crowder desposed, which were exactly the reasons why Mr. Griffith negotiated the deals. Mr. Griffith, however, is side-stepping any pennant predictions for his ball club.

Trades May Not Account For Difference.

Before this department ventures to predict a pennant for Washington, I first would like to arrive at some basis for balancing the deficiencies of last season when the Yankees arrived at the finish line fourteen full games ahead of the Nats.

Barring a sensational slump by the Yankees from their 1932 form, it is doubtful if the Nats' trades will account for the fourteen-game difference between the clubs last season. The Nats apparently have added to both their attack and their defense, but fourteen games are fourteen games, enough to decide pennants over a series of years.

There is, of course, the case of the St. Louis Cardinals of 1932. The Cardinals, pennant winners of the season before, were the favorites to repeat last year only to shock the baseball world by failing to finish in the first division. And that is not the only precedent for any slump that may befall the Yankees.

Cases of 1932 Cards and 1933 Yanks Differ.

But the cases of the Cardinals of 1932 and the Yankees of 1933 are quite different. It will be remembered that Branch Rickey, playing philanthropist, sold Chick Hafey, Taylor Douthit and Burleigh Grimes between seasons, stripping the club of three of its most valuable regulars. The Yankees of 1932 are intact.

The Yankees are not an old club as pennant winners go. Babe Ruth and Earl Combs are the only comparatively aged members of the cast. And the Yankees rarely sell their stars. Babe Ruth is not as spry as he used to be in the outfield, but the 41 home runs he hit last year are evidence of his permanency of a batting threat.

The Yanks' pitchers are by no means oldsters. Ruffing and Gomez and Johnny Allen, the three headliners of the staff, are a youthful trio. George Pipgras' career is also comparatively yound. The ageing Herb Pennock was of little help last season, and there was also Walter Brown. So rapidly was Brown's rise at the fag end of 1932 that Manager Joe McCarthy seriously considered starting him in the first world series game against the Cubs.

ROWLAND QUITS ALBANY.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Clarence H. Rowland, president and manager of the Albany Club of the International Baseball League last year, has turned back the franchise to the Chicago Club of the National League and will not exercise his option to purchase a controlling interest in the local team, he informed the Knickerbocker Press tonight in a telegram from Chicago.

Robins Again Seek Judge, Is Report

Nats' Veteran Says New Negotiations News to Him.

Failed in Move for $2,500 Bonus at Winter Meeting.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

"IT may be true—and I hope it is—but, if so, it's a mighty funny way for the Dodgers to to do business. I haven't heard from them since the last day of the major league baseball meetings on December 15."

This was the comment of Joe Judge, Nats' first-base veteran, last night when asked regarding reports from New York to the effect that the Brooklyn National League Club had agreed to his terms.

"I made Manager Max Carey a proposition after turning down one of his," Joe continued, "and he said that he would consider it. Maybe he has decided to take me up, but, if he has, you would think that I'd know it first."

So Judge, like his many friends who wish him luck, is still marking time in the hope that the New York dispatches have the right dope. As a matter of fact, the Dodgers appear to be Judge's only hope of remaining in the big league. Del Bissonette, their regular-sacker, came down with a series of ailments during the off-season of 1931 and was unable to play at all last year. Needless to say, his loss ruined the Dodgers' chances of getting anywhere in the pennant race.

Bissonette Lost 50 Pounds.

Bissonette has advised Manager Carey that he will be able to play next season, but in view of the fact that the first-sacker lost more than 50 pounds, and is still said to be in a weakened condition, the Dodgers would like to have a finished product like Judge available and were quite interested when Clark Griffith, Nat owner, gave them permission to dicker with Judge, at no expense to them.

At the time Judge was holding his conferences with the Brooklyn club, he also was being considered by the Cincinnati Reds, the only other team in the big time circuits which was weak at first, and he rather foolishly tried to start some bidding between them, although he preferred to go with the Dodgers.

Carey, at their last meeting, offered Joe a $10,000 contract and a bonus of $1,500 for signing, it is understood, but the player proved himself to be a mighty poor business man by turning down the proposition because he wanted a $2,500 bonus. It was this demand of $12,500 for next season that Judge left for consideration by the Dodgers when the big league meetings ended last month.

Since this time, Joe's other bet, the Cincinnati Reds, have landed Jim Bottomley from the St. Louis Cardinals, so the popular Washington veteran is out of the running there.

If Judge is smart, he will waive that little matter of $1,000 which stood between him and the Brooklyn club and see if its offer still stands. The writer can think of several people who would be willing to take a $10,000 job without any bonus, especially when their future in their profession is as shakey as that of Joe's at this time.

Manager Carey has high hopes of his Dodgers putting up a pennant battle this season. The first base job there would be an ideal spot for Judge and his many friends here are pulling for him to land. Maybe he already has, but, as he says: "It's a funny way for the Dodgers to do business."

Dodgers Deny Reports Judge Has Been Signed

New York, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—Dave Driscoll, business manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, tonight denied reports that Joe Judge, veteran first baseman of the Washington Nationals, had contracted to join the Flatbush Club.

MAT HEAVIES STRUT SKILL TONIGHT

Dusek Dusts Off Best Scowls for Feature With Judson.

THE gamboling heavyweights of the firm of Londos, Londos, Steele & Londos, Inc., strut their undeniable stuff at the Washington Auditorium tonight, beginning at 8:30 o'clock, in a card of five exhibitions to be headed by a meeting between Rudy Dusek and Frank Judson.

Others on the card are Ray Steele, considered by many as the best wrestler in America today, who meets Son Jennings; Tiger Nelson vs. Jack Hurley; Herman Hickman vs. Joe Cox, and Johnny Maxos vs. one Tiny Ruff.

Most of the interest centers around the return of Rudy Dusek to the arms of the Believers. There are hundreds of wrestling fans who swear by Rudy and several thousand who swear at him. The boys who are against him will have plenty of opportunities to yell tonight, for Rudy has dusted off all of his villainous tricks and scowls and is ready to make life miserable for Judson, whose path here has been strewn with roses.

Rudy lost to Dr. Karl Sarpolis in Baltimore Tuesday night, but that's because he hasn't been working much of late, not having seen action for 24 hours before the Sarpolis match.

The Joe Cox-Herman Hickman match looks about the most evenly matched affair on the bill. The two bruisers are willing, rough and studiously relentless. It should be a fine 30-minute draw.

Outside of Dusek, Tiger Nelson is the most interesting man on the bill. Tiger is an elderly gobbler, the proud papa of six kiddies, and as kind a gent off the stage as you could want to meet. In the ring he is the personification of all that is unfatherly.

Women accompanied by paying escorts are admitted free. First knuckle-crack at 8:30 o'clock.

Renaissance Five Conquers Eagles

The French Eagles last night were taken in tow to the tune of 40 to 26 by the fast colored world champion Renaissance five, of New York, who led all the way. Eighteen hundred fans saw the game at the Masonic Auditorium.

The count was 14 to 7 at the end of the first period, with "Fats" Jenkins tossing ringers from various points and Yancey and Saitch alternating with slow loopers and fancy shots off the backboard. In this period Berger and Evans alone could locate the basket, and in the next period the Rens held the Eagles scoreless. The half ended 24 to 7.

Joe Sweeney came to life in the second half, as did Evans, for three baskets each. The play was all speed, the Renaissance Team apparently playing by habit, introducing teamwork and precision such as is seldom witnessed on local courts. Berger, all-American collegiate forward, was held to one basket.

Coach Burke Released by Yankees

McCarthy Will Lead 33 Players South, Roster Reveals.

Werber, Capital Star, to Get Chance; Lone Rookie Outfielder.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—The New York Yankees announced today the unconditional release of Coach Jimmy "Sunset" Burke, and a roster of 33 players, who will make the trek to the world champions' spring training camp at St. Petersburg, Fla., in two detachments March 1 and 8.

The release of Burke, long a lieutenant of Manager Joe McCarthy came as a surprise inasmuch as the Yankees, in the recent baseball meetings, opposed successfully a move to reduce rosters by including coaches in the player limit of 23.

Burke joined the Chicago Cubs as coach in 1925 when McCarthy took over the management. Back in 1911, when Burke managed Indianapolis he reduced McCarthy from second baseman to bench duty but that failed to mar a firm friendship.

Krichell and Perkins To Coach.

No reason was announced for Burke's release, and his place was taken on the roster by Paul Krichell, listed also as a Yankee scout. Arthur Fletcher, former manager of the Phillies, and Ralph "Cy" Perkins, long a catcher with the Athletics, were retained as coaches.

The roster revealed that "Red" Rolfe, former Dartmouth shortstop star, who played sensational ball with Newark on the International League Yankee "farm," would not go South with the team. The names of Ed Wells, veteran southpaw, and George Selkirk, young outfielder, also were excluded from the list, the assumption being that all three will spend the summer in Newark.

In addition to the coaches and Manager McCarthy, the roster listed fourteen pitchers, nine infielders, seven outfielders and three catchers.

Five of the recruits are pitchers and will report to the camp March 1. They are right-handers, Don Brennan and Pete Jablonowski, both from Newark; Jimmy Deshong, Sacramento, and Russell Van Atta, St. Paul, and Marvin Duke, Erie, both southpaws.

Walker Only Rookie Outfielder.

Fred Walker, from Newark, is the only rookie outfielder bolstering the Yankee clouting veterans, headed by Babe Ruth, but the roster includes three young infielders in Bill Werber, shortstop from Buffalo; Roy Schalk, from Oklahoma City, and Jack Saltzgaver, who had a trial last season, but dropped back to Newark.

Joe Glenn, from Newark, is added to the veteran catching staff of Bill Dickey and Arndt Jorgens.

The Graw Eliminates Harford; Cuts 3 Stakes

Baltimore, Jan 4 (A.P.).—The Maryland Racing Commission today granted officials of the Havre de Grace race track permission to eliminate one stake race and reduce the purses for three others at its spring meet, which will open the Eastern racing season April 15.

The $10,000 Harford, the usual opening day feature for three-year-olds and up at six furlongs, was eliminated. The purses of the other three were reduced from $10,000 to $7,500 each, effecting a saving of $17,500 during the spring meet.

The reduced stake prices are: The Aberdeen for juveniles at four and one-half furlongs, the Chesapeake, a test race for Preakness and Kentucky Derby candidates at a mile and a sixteenth, and the Philadelphia Handicap for three-year-olds and up at a mile and a sixteenth.

Havre de Grace was the last of the four mile tracks of Maryland to request reductions, having reported the best finanical results for 1932. Its 15 per cent turnover on net profits to the State of Maryland was about $25,000. The overnight purses already have been reduced to $800 for all four tracks.

2 Qualifiers Get Aces In Los Angeles Trials

Los Angeles, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Jimmie Thomson, of Colorado Springs, and Emory Zimmerman, of Portland, Oreg., led the qualifiers today for the Los Angeles open golf tournament, which starts Friday.

Holes in one were turned in by two of the contestants, both amateurs. The aces were scored by Johnny Mescal, of Culver City, Calif., on No. 14 hole of the Sunset Fields course, and by E. R. Maule, of Los Angeles, on No. 11.

They shot 139s, three under par for the 36 holes to lead the field of 78, who, by virtue of scores of 157 or better, earned the right to play for the $5,000 prize money.

Thirty-two entrants were exempt, including Gene Sarazen, British and United States open champion, who is en route here for the tournament.

Getz and Dempsey To Discuss Fight

New York, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—George F. Getz, Chicago sportsman who aided Tex Rickard in the promotion of the second Tunney-Dempsey fight will arrive here tomorrow to discuss the possibility of bringing the Max Schmeling-Max Baer match to Chicago next summer, Jack Dempsey said today.

While no definite offer has been made, Dempsey said he would discuss the situation in general with Getz.

Schmeling, who with Baer, signed articles recently for a match under Dempsey's promotion in June, insists that the bout be for fifteen rounds.

Phils Release Friberg, 12 Years in Big League

Philadelphia, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Barney Friberg, for the last eight years a familiar figure in the Philadelphia National League Club infield, was today given his unconditional release.

Friberg came to the Phils eight years ago from the Chicago Cubs for the waiver price. He had been four seasons with the Cubs and this twelve years major league service entitled him to unconditional release. He has played all four infield positions on the Phillies.

Parrack Star Of Colonial Triumph

Invaders Trail, 23-16, at Half; Beaghen Leads State.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

A LOOSE-JOINTED gent by the name of Wick Parrack, who is so tall he runs afoul the building height law every now and then, carried his faltering George Washington University Basket Ball Team to a squeaky victory over North Carolina State last night, 34-29, before as many people as can be packed in the piano-box with inflammatory rheumatism that G. W. uses for a gymnasium.

Held at bay throughout the first 10 minutes of play, and then given a terrific battle in the home stretch, the uncertain G. W.'s got home safely to win their third game of the season only by the grace of St. Wick Parrack and the bogging down upon several occasions of North Carolinian attack, certainly the most able that has been seen in Washington this season.

Unfurling beautiful pick-off plays, with other N. C. State players blocking the gaunt Colonials out of play after play, the visitors produced moments of rare basket ball skill and only the towering Parrack man stood between them and a decisive victory over the home team.

Burgess' Shooting Missed.

Missing the shooting of Forrest Burgess, who was relegated to the bench to salve certain Southern Conference rules concerning the transfer of athletes, and also handicapped by the fact that George Beaghen, 6-foot-4 visiting center, was rendering Ty Hertzler, G. W.'s 6-foot-5 center, about as harmless as a movie tiger, G. W. was flicked to victory in the last few moments of play.

Wayne Chambers helped matters surprisingly near the end. Chambers plays the same role on the G. W.

N. C. State to Play C. U. Five Tonight

A scrambled line-up, which does not include the captain of the team, will meet the challenge of North Carolina State tonight when Catholic University attempts to duplicate the victory G. W. achieved last night over the fast-passing visitors from Raleigh, N. C. The C. U.-N. C. State game will be played at Catholic University gymnasium beginning at 8:15 o'clock.

ZENKA WITHSTANDS DRIVE TO WIN JEFFERSON PARK FEATURE

Skirl, Choice, Fails to Get In Money

Whippercracker Second and Wrackell Next Over Line.

Calvert Completes Double on Spot Pot, $27 to $2.

JEFFERSON PARK, New Orleans, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Eight of the better class platers clashed in the Fairway Drive Purse, a mile and 70 yards test, which held the honored position on the card here today. F. A. Riley's filly, Zenka, under the veteran J. Leland's capable handling, withstood a hard drive with Whippercracker to win by three parts of a length at odds of $13.60 for $2. Wrackell, beaten four lengths for the place, headed Skirl, the favorite, out of the show.

Zenka had to run a powerful race to win. She broke slowly and was last entering the back stretch as Skirl was opening up a long lead. La Salle and Nyack were closest to the fast pace, while Whippercracker moved up fast at the far turn. After turning for home, Whippercracker got his head in front as Skirl began to quit.

Zenka Steady Gainer Near End.

Zenka, making up ground with great speed, steadily crept up on the leader and, taking command at the sixteenth pole, drew away in a drive. Wrackell caught a lot of tired horses to land the show.

Modesto and Drombo drew the bulk of play in the sixth, and they obliged by running one-two, respectively, two lengths separating the pair at the wire. Lerack was third, another three lengths away. The winner shot right to the front at the break and under good rating by little T. P. Martin always held Drombo under control. The winner paid $5.40.

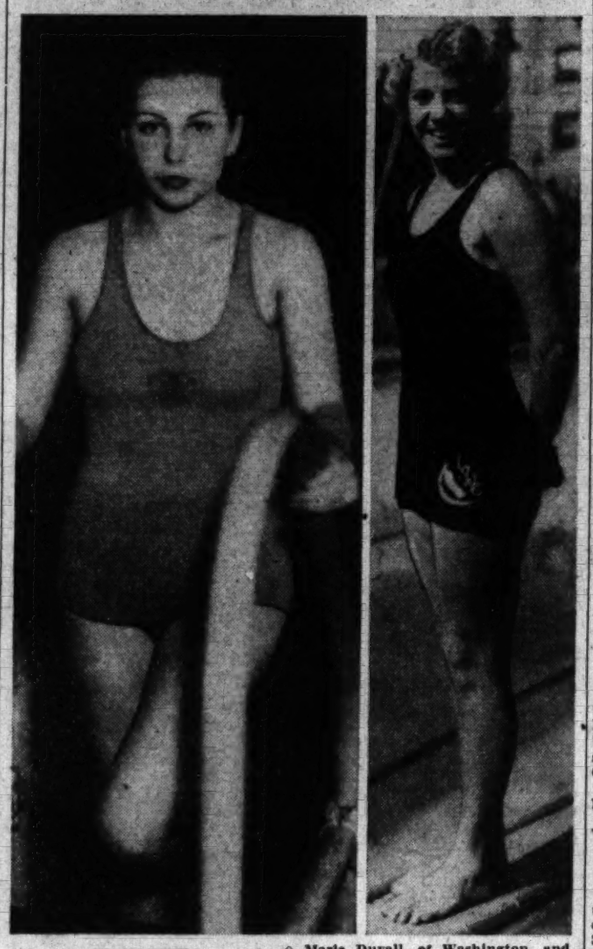
Olympic Diving Champion To Show Skill in Capital



Marie Duvall, of Washington, and Georgia Coleman, Olympic champion, who will give an exhibition of diving Saturday night in the Shoreham pool under the auspices of the District Chapter of the A. A. U.

Georgia Coleman and Marie Duvall Will Swim at Shoreham.

THE best diver in America, and the most promising diver in Washington, Georgia Coleman and Marie Duvall, respectively, will participate in the Shoreham Pool's swimming and diving regatta Saturday night, the former as a special added attraction and the latter as an active competitor.

The appearance of Miss Coleman, Olympic champion, dominates the meet. The New York girl has dominated women's diving for four years as it perhaps has never been dominated before. Her repertory Saturday night will include the customary dives such as swan and jacknife and a number of specialties in which will be included her 2½ somersault (she is believed to be the only woman diver who can do this); her ½ gainor and the difficult backward spring forward 1½ somersault.

Miss Duvall was a diving prodigy at 10 years of age, dropped out of the game for several years and now at 16 shows promise of fame of national proportions if she secures the proper coaching. She gained her best win near the end of last season when she beat both Onalene Lawrence and Lois Bates in an A. A. U. meet. Both of these latter stars will be in Saturday night's events, although Miss Lawrnece, holder of most of the diving titles hereabouts, may not compete.

In the men's events, the Ambassador Swimming Club and Central High School have entered teams. Ambassador will be manned by Johnny Broaddus, Norman Smith, Glasscock, Rauls, Ralt, Jordan, Goldsmith, Fite, Helvin and Alvarado. Central will enter Graves, Tarbot, Snyder, Wilson, Rose, McDonald, Slater, Burns, Baumgarten and Wood.

Among the other girls entered are Lenore Taube, Rita and Madeline Augusterfer, Evangeline Rice, Caroline Cox, Annabelle Whaler, Ellen Jones and Mary Maureen.

AT THE POST

with Bill Bennings

DEAR AL: JEFFERSON PARK, JANUARY 4.

The Gilbert-Mills jockey battle is over but the influence of that contest lingers over this track each afternoon. Just as their arrival presented betters with the proposition of betting on those riders or not betting on them, their departure has put an added touch to the gamble here. What will the horses that they have been riding do without them. That's the problem that faces the mutuel battlers now.

You'd be surprised at the number of strictly jockey betters—I mean race players who bet riders regardless of their mounts or the conditions. Parke seems to be the choice of that group now, although I'd prefer to follow the promising youngster Calvert. About today, I've nothing to say. BILL.

FIRST RACE—RIFF RAFF has his splendid recent showings and some fast workouts to recommend him for the key position in this field. It looks like he'll have to take the measure of BILL ORANGE. PAULA L. could be third among these and could win it if the top ones run into any mistakes.

SECOND RACE—TADCASTER has a winning performance to his credit at this course and it would not be out of order for him to step lively enough to take care of these. CHIANTI and DOLLAR PRINCESS appear best of the others. The last named may improve on a fast track.

THIRD RACE—COL. CLOISTER has all his speed and may turn in a victory here at a fair price. Gets a few pounds from the leading contenders. VON SCION, which startled the boys with a big place mutuel in Maryland, to place ahead of SIR MICHAEL.

FOURTH RACE—QUARTER DECK is beginning to show some of his real speed and should give a good account of himself among these. I look for him to ring up a set of brackets. THE BREAK won his last impressively. JACK BIENER is better than that last.

FIFTH RACE—ANNE L. appears to standout in the feature, but I hardly expect to get a price. JUSTINA has regained top form since arriving here and will be the nut to crack. SISTER MARY for the show.

SIXTH RACE—JAZ AGE showed me enough the last time to warrant being put in front of this group. While not the star of a year ago, this one seems to be working into something resembling form. BARASHKOVA may take the measure of THE FRENCH ROSE for the place.

SEVENTH RACE—BURNSIDE will appreciate the fast going and has moved fast in the morning. ST. MICA and JEAN WACHS for the second and third money.

MACK MEETS SANSTOL AT PORTNER'S

Mann Matches Two Highly-Rated Bantamweights.

PETE SANSTOL, ranked second last year in the bantamweight division, will return to Portner's Arena for an eight-round main battle against Jimmy Mack, hard-hitting Philadelphian, next Tuesday night, Matchmaker Frankie Mann yesterday announced.

Sanstol scored a decisive triumph over Benny Schwartz, Baltimore flash, a few weeks ago, after wearing down the little Jewish battler with a terrific body attack in the last four rounds. Sanstol holds both the bantamweight and flyweght championships in Norway, and is working his way up to a title match with the champion, Panama Al Brown, which, according to his manager, will take place in Montreal.

Hitting the Headpin

JACK TALBERT, eagle-eye bowler of the Georgetown team of the Men's District League, cracked the duckpins for a new season's high game record last night at the Columbia alleys with a 174—three pins above the mark which Perce Wolfe, of Hyattsville, and Earl McPhilomey, of Lucky Strike, previously had shared. Talbert and McPhilomy are the co-holders of the all-time District League set record of 453.

Despite Talbert's brilliant score, Georgetown failed to win that particular game—the first, and also dropped the set, as Columbia emerged the victor in two out of three. Talbert had nine marks in his record game, but he slumped in the next two, shooting 111 and 102 for 387, high for the night.

Columbia won both high team game and set honors with 594 and 1,711, respectively.

The seventh-place Judd & Detwiler team upset the dope in the National Capital League last night by making a clean sweep of its games with Colonial Ice Cream Co., which is tied for top place with King's Palace. J. & D. had 600, 664, 561, 1,815 for team set honors. Paul Bryan, of the victors, had high game and set with 149 and 383.

Four teams registered clean sweeps in the six matches in the Ladies' District League last night.

With Lorraine Guill shooting a high 146 and 357, the pace-setting King Pin girls walloped Lucky Strike in a trio; Recreation, rolling a dummy, and paced by Evelyn Ellis, with 129 and 318, defeated Arcadia; the champion Rendezvous turned back Lucky Strike as Katherine Forteney shot a 125 high game and Irene Scott a 324 high set; Jennie Malcolm, pioneer woman's bowler, had 129 and 341 to lead Georgetown Recreation to victory over Mount Rainier.

Columbia beat Meyer Davis two out of three, Betty Hoffman getting 124 and 342, both high. Viola Bechtold, rolling her first match with Meyer Davis, posted a 318 to lead her team. Bill Woods trimmed Convention Hall in two out of three, Virginia Yarnell's 119 and 317, featuring.

McKee, of B. T. U., won honors in the Bureau of Standards League, at Columbia, with 130 and 347, respectively.

Simonton, after shooting a 140 high game, crashed through with a 372 set to hang up a new season's record in the Dynamite League, at Arcadia. His team, the Blow Hards, set a new high team mark with 561 and won high team set honors with 1,577.

The Bankers League saw Lord, of National Saving and Trust, win both high game and high set with 169 and 401. Union Trust posted a 587 for high team game, and National Saving and Trust bowled 1,681 for high team set.

Berrall and Carl tied for high individual game honors at 130 in the Civic Club League, at Arcadia. Robb shot 351 for high set. The Lions, with 567 and 1,590, won game and set honors.

Poreda Rates Poreda No. 1 In Heavyweight Division

By JACK CUDDY

NEW YORK, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—Stanley Poreda, huge brown-haired Polish boy, stopped grunting in front of the heavy bag in Joe Jeanett's Gymnasium today to make his first official ranking of American heavyweights.

The 200-pounder was working out in this Union City, N. J., Gymnasium preparatory to meeting Ernie Schaaf, of Boston, at Madison Square Garden Friday night.

Pulling off a glove and wiping his perspiring forehead with a bandaged hand, the 6-footer started talking—and if he ever can fight like he can talk he should be a champion.

The 23-year-old mauler listed the heavyweights as follows: (1) Poreda, (2) Sharkey, (3) Baer, (4) Schaaf, (5) Schmeling.

"But you're putting yourself first," said the writer.

"That's the way I figure," explained the Pride of Jersey City. "I don't kid myself that these other guys are good. I know they're not so hot. And I'm convinced I've got the class, everything that's needed to be a genuine champion."

Stan's words flowed out like chaff from a thrashing chute. He talked faster than Sharkey, was more egotistical, if possible, than the Boston gob, and shoved other heavyweights into their places with more abandon than the champion ever thought of doing.

"Sharkey—haw!" Poreda gave the heavy bag a shove. "I figure any smart high school boy ought to beat him. He blows up in the ring. Tunney could have killed him. Tunney fought like I do. Use a little intelligence and get Sharkey nettled and he's a goner."

FRIENDS BOW, 27 TO 23, TO WESTERN

Winner Not Decided Until Last 2 Minutes of Play.

STAVING off a desperate last-minute rally, Western High school took a close 27-23 decision over Friends School on the latter's court yesterday afternoon.

Sweeping into the lead when Duvall and Brennan caged goals in rapid succession, Western was out in front after ten minutes with a 9-6 advantage. The tight battle was carried into the second quarter, and ended with Western ahead by 15-12.

But Seven Points Scored In Third.

So close was the guarding of both teams that Western was able to amass but 4 more points in the third quarter, while Friends came through with 3.

Stocks Renew Advances As Shorts Run to Cover

New York, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Financial markets turned about today and rallied vigorously.

For stocks the improvement was slow but steady until the last hour, when shorts covered more aggressively, piling up net gains of 1 to around 5 points in many trading favorites.

Altogether, it was the market's best day in some weeks. Wall street suddenly seemed to find itself with a variety of topics to talk about, though the extent to which such subjects influenced prices was difficult to determine.

It was assumed in some quarters that the Treasury deficit figure for the first half of the fiscal year had been a factor in the little "run" on dollars.

The upturn by shares was broad, though it was most impressive in stocks that were harboring the largest short interests. Farm implement issues naturally responded to wheat's advance, Case closing up more than 4 points and Harvester about 2. American Telephone, Allied Chemical and Auburn rose 4½ to nearly 5. U. S. Steel issues improved the better part of 3 points, while Du Pont, American Can, Consolidated Gas, National Biscuit, Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Lackawanna, American Tobacco "B," and Bethlehem rallied 2 to 3½. Transactions totaled 1,093,288 shares, in sharp contrast to yesterday's small volume.

BONDS CLIMB AGAIN IN STRONG MARKETS

Six-Tenths Gain Is Recorded as Turnover Rises to $12,237,000.

New York, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—The bond market snapped back sharply today with the United States Government department taking the lead in recoveries which embraced all categories.

The volume increased with the price upturn, sales totaling $12,237,000, par value. The average for 60 domestic corporate loans advanced six-tenths of a point.

Nearly all of the Federals exceeded their 1932 high levels, the principal activity being centered in Liberty 3½s and Fourth 4¼s and Treasury 3s, 3¼s and 4¼s. The turnover in the Government group approximated $2,400,000 at par. Gains ranged from 3-32 to 27-32 of a point.

Not only the Federal list moved up, but the highest grade public utilities held around their recent top quotations and semispeculative and foreign issues responded to the renewed demand with advances of 1 to 5 or more points.

Among the most prominent gainers were some loans of American & Foreign Power, American Ice, American I. G. Chemical, American Telephone, Santa Fe, Baltimore & Ohio, Bethlehem Steel, Boston & Maine, Consolidated Gas, Chesapeake Corporation and Chesapeake & Ohio.

FOREIGN MARKETS.

(Associated Press.)

London—Prices on the stock exchange reacted on profit-taking, especially gold mining issues, which fluctuated rapidly and closed lower. Gilteedged securities, industrials and Japanese bonds were freely offered. Transatlantic shares were uncertain while Argentine rails were higher on hopes of a labor agreement. The close was unsettled.

Paris—The bourse sagged on persistent hesitation in Wall street and less satisfactory advices from Brussels and London. The closing was heavy.

Berlin—Trading on the boerse was inactive and prices declined a few points and closed weak on speculative selling. I. G. Farben issues held steady.

Holiday Spending Indicates Use of Hoarded Currency

New York, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—A striking financial phenomenon of the holiday season was the small amount of currency withdrawn from the banks.

In part, it presumably reflected a smaller volume of Christmas shopping than in recent years, but lower prices also undoubtedly had much to do with it.

Another factor in the modest withdrawal of cash may have been the use of currency which had been in hoarding, to supplement the money taken from banks. With currency in circulation still somewhat above a year ago, and close to a billion dollars above two years ago, it appears that an abnormal amount of cash is still being "banked" in socks and tin cans.

The Federal Reserve statements this year showed that money in circulation increased only $95,000,000 between November 23 and December 21. This was the smallest in years. Immediately after the Christmas holiday money began pouring back into the banks, circulation decreasing $43,000,000 in the week ended December 28.

Collateral Borrowings Rise to $346,804,658

New York, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Collateral borrowings of New York Stock Exchange members on December 31 amounted to $346,804,658, against $337,612,558 on November 30, the exchange reported today.

Collateral loans reached their low level since records have been compiled last July, at $241,599,943. The record high was $8,549,383,979 at the end of September, 1929.

Consolidated Gas Offers $5,000,000 in Bonds

New York, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—The first sizable new financing to be announced for the New Year made its appearance today when the Consolidated Gas Electric Light & Power Co., of Baltimore, entered the market for $5,000,000.

The offering consisted of first refunding mortgage sinking fund gold bonds, 4 per cent series, due in 1981, which were priced at 97½ to yield about 4.12 per cent.

CURB PRICES HIGHER IN HEAVIER TRADING

Active Bidding Is Laid to Short Covering; Sales, 140,000 Shares.

New York, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Stimulated by the brisk rise on the big board, the Curb Market today threw off its inertia and advanced vigorously. The turnover increased moderately, with transfers at 140,000 shares, compared with 90,000 yesterday.

Trading favorites among utilities and industrials shot ahead in a manner suggesting active bidding by an uneasy short interest. Gains of 1 to 3 points were recorded in Electric Bond & Share, Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, American Gas & Electric, Buffalo Niagara Eastern Power first preferred, American Light & Traction and New England Power preferred.

Aluminum Company of America jumped about 4 points and Adams Millis preferred made a similar gain. Swift International improved more than a point, and Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Railroad, a New York Central subsidiary, rose 3 points on small sales.

Newmont led the way in the mining division with a rise of about 2 points. Investment Trust issues attracted greater attention, particularly Graymur Corporation, which pushed ahead more than 2 points following announcement of Tri-Continental Corporation's offer to acquire its portfolio.

Whistles and Blasts Hail Georgia Bank Reopening

Statesboro, Ga., Jan. 4 (A.P.).—They reopen a closed bank in this town much in the manner of a Roman holiday or a Fourth of July picnic. As the clock chimed 9 a. m., the doors of the Sea Island Bank swung open, the town fire whistle shrieked deafening blasts and the crowd rushed in with money in their hands and cheers in their throats.

Everybody shook hands with the bank officials and then turned around and shook hands with each other for good measure. The lobby looked like a floral shop and men and women, white and Negro, jostled around forming lines to make their deposits.

The bank closed more than a year ago. Last December 4 the Bank of Statesboro closed and since then the town and county had been without home banking facilities.

WHEAT VALUES RISE ON SPECULATIVE BIDS

Buying Boosts All Grains as Demand for Futures Increases.

Chicago, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Decided increase of speculative buying did much to give an all-around hoist to grain values today.

Lively demand for future deliveries of all cereals was in evidence from start to finish, and led to the best advance witnessed in weeks. Friends of price upturns asserted Europe was giving belated recognition to the fact that without the United States surplus the world wheat supply and demand situation was a strong rather than a weak one, and that but little wheat in this country was available either to foreign or home markets at prevailing prices.

Wheat closed strong at virtually the day's top, 1½ to ⅝ above yesterday's finish; corn, ⅝ to ⅞ up; oats, ⅛ advanced, and provisions showing 2 to 20 cents gain.

Drought Reports Effect.

A notable feature was much sharper notice taken of persistent drought reports from the Southwest, especially advices that the western third of Kansas, which raises one-third of the wheat crop of the State, had received only 55 per cent of normal rainfall from July 1 to December 31, against 77 per cent the previous season. Moreover, the central third which raises 60 per cent of the Kansas crop had but 81.1 per cent of normal rainfall, compared with 101 per cent the year before. Possibilities of a cold wave in domestic winter wheat territory served also as a stimulus to buyers.

Statements by a trade authority that indications were for augmented world shipments of wheat the ensuing seven months, and that importing countries had used their native wheat to an unusual extent of late, tended to accelerate price upturns. Particular stress was put on the fact that Liverpool wheat prices were the highest since December 12, and that Winnipeg went to a fractional premium over Chicago, compared with around 4½ cents discount a short time ago. Returns today from more than 1,000 stations throughout the United States showed January prices for wheat, corn and oats were the lowest for that date ever known.

Corn and oats readily responded to wheat strength. Industries were bidding for corn to arrive.

COTTON PRICES RISE ON ACTIVE TRADING

March Closes at 6.23 as General Market Gains 18 to 25 Points.

New York, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Cotton advanced about $1 a bale today, with the market showing more breadth and activity than on the previous day.

March contracts advanced to 6.23, or 24 points above yesterday's closing quotations on trade buying and covering, which was active in the late trading. The close was firm at net advance of 18 to 25 points.

The opening was 1 to 4 points higher in response to steady Liverpool cables and trade buying. Houses with Liverpool and continental connections were among the early buyers.

Strength of the grain and stock markets stimulated demand from local sources, while there was also some buying here by New Orleans on the late advance, which carried the price of July contracts up to 6.48, making new high ground for the movement.

Little Aid From News.

Except for the steadiness abroad and strength in other markets, no special news factor was particularly emphasized in connection with the advance, but some brokers were inclined to attribute part of the buying to the talk of possible inflationary measures in Washington.

Liverpool cables said that hedging had been absorbed by trade calling and buying, promoted by the firmer ruling of Egyptian cotton and also reported a more active spot demand in the market there, with a more hopeful outlook for business in the Manchester goods market.

Egyptian cotton futures in Liverpool were 7 to 13 points higher. A private crop reporting authority said that preliminary data on the outlook for the 1933 acreage does not indicate much change as compared with the acreage planted last year. Exports today 34,284, making 4,299,269 so far this season. Port receipts, 71,580. United States port stocks, 4,796,792.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

MIDWINTER FOOTBALL TALK.

FOOTBALL coaches at their mid-winter meeting admitted the game has become so intricate today that even the players have to get the Sunday papers to find out what happened.

* * * *

There is at least a definite feeling that the game should be shifted back to the days of simple football when at least the referee knew what was going on.

* * * *

College football has reached a point where it could be placed under the dead language department for the simple reason that it has become Greek to everybody concerned.

* * * *

It has been a well-known fact for years that the spectators have been completely in the dark, but the speeches at the recent meeting of coaches in New York was the first admission that the players were also present but not voting.

* * * *

The only point generally understood is that the game is played with an inflated ball and that most of the work is done by a fellow with a police whistle.

* * * *

Nobody except the rules committeemen knows all the rules governing those gridiron classics, and they aren't any too positive.

* * * *

The referee and umpire gave up trying to master them about four years ago. A football official in a modern college game is in the position of a master of ceremonies at a riot in the Polish Corridor.

* * * *

Football was originally a game which students could play without the least danger of a mental collapse. Any injury they sustained was physical. Today a boy can develop amnesia during the spring practice.

* * * *

The original idea was to toss a football to 22 boys and see which side could get it between two given points in the most workmanlike manner. In those days it was believed that football and pleasure could mix.

* * * *

Now it has become a sport for parliamentarians. Many a great prospective punter has been ruined by his inability to master Articles VI to IX, Section 107-B, including the last-minute amendments.

* * * *

The coaches are now declaring they want to get back to fundamentals and the public is with them.

* * * *

It would be grand if the cash customers could follow the general plot and know whether the winning score was made by a touchdown, a sacrifice fly or a carom off the eight ball.

WITH A CLOSE TO THE CHEST BREAST STROKE.

President Hoover's Research Committee on Social Trends has filed its report and warned the country against a "drifting" policy in the present crisis. "Drifting!" exclaimed a business man as he read it. "If all I'm going to do is drifting then a man going over Shoshone Falls in a keg is swimming upstream!"

Yale has named as its new football coach a man who showed Mexico City how to play American football. Now if he can show New Haven, all will be well.

Elmer Twitchell, commenting on that plan to substitute electrical energy for money, says he lost all his money the other day in a run on the power house.

STEAM MAIN BLAST SCALDS 2 WORKERS; SCORES FRIGHTENED

Debris Hurled Across Street; Other Employes Flee and Are Not Hurt.

Two men were scalded, one severely, when a steam main at Nineteenth street and Virginia avenue northwest, exploded yesterday, scattering debris over the street and frightening workers in surrounding temporary Government buildings.

Elzie E. Powell, electrician, who lives in Mount Rainier, Md., and who was critically injured several months ago when he came in contact with a live electric wire, was severely burned by the steam. He was treated at the Naval Hospital.

Burned About Head.

Norman Foote, of Congress Heights, who was working with Powell on an electric wire beside the main, was slightly burned about the head. He was given first-aid treatment at the Naval Dispensary.

The two men had been working on another section of the wiring and had just approached the steel main. As they bent over the ditch along which the main runs an expansion joint in the steel pipe blew out with a heavy explosion and the two men were enveloped in a cloud of steam. Other workmen in the vicinity escaped injury by running from the scene.

Large Crowd Attracted.

Asbestos covering on the piping and the earth surrounding it were thrown across the street by the force of the explosion. The noise attracted a large crowd from the neighboring Government buildings.

The steam main led from a power house adjoining it and supplied temporary Government buildings with heat. According to engineers, the pressure in the main was 40 pounds. The steam continued to escape from the broken main for several hours after the accident.

Change-Making Trick Worked on Cafe Cashier

Carl Watts, proprietor of Carl's Cafe at 4241 Wisconsin avenue northwest, told police last night that he was victimized to the amount of $8.70 by a change-making swindler.

He said the man, in paying a 30-cent ticket, offered a $20 bill, then found he had a $10 bill and still later discovered a $1 bill in his pocket. It was not until the man had gone that Watts discovered he had taken the change offered for the $10 bill as well as the change for the $1 bill.

$150 Chest of Tools Stolen.

A chest of tools, valued at $150, was stolen from the new Department of Justice Building, Tenth street and Constitution avenue northwest, it was reported yesterday by Paul D. Ammot, superintendent of the construction company.

$50 Is Obtained In 3 Robberies

Delicatessen and Two Oil Stations Are Victimized in Series of Thefts.

While a customer looked on, a lone robber early today held up and robbed Morris Steinman, manager of the Circle Delicatessen, 550 Connecticut avenue, of approximately $25. The man dashed from the delicatessen, entered an automobile in which two men waited for him and escaped.

As he was closing for the night, two robbers held up and robbed John Miller, night manager of a filling station at Eighteenth and L streets northwest, of about $10. When the men entered the station they asked for a package of tire patches, as has been the case in several filling station robberies lately.

John Seaman, manager of a filling station at Georgia avenue and Kenyon street northwest, was held up and robbed of $15 last night by two robbers.

Maid May Regain Stolen Pay by Chance Notation of Numbers.

Ella Hayes, maid at the home of Mrs. Lloyd B. Wilson, 2445 Wyoming avenue northwest, yesterday received $42 in payment for services. Her husband took half of it, and she put her $21 in the drawer of a table in the basement at the Wilson home.

After Mrs. Wilson left home during the afternoon the maid took the police dog and tied it in the kennel. When she returned to her work in the basement she saw a man run around the corner of the house. She immediately looked for her money and it was gone.

The maid told police that shortly after Mrs. Wilson left, a man rang the front door bell and asked whether "The madam was at home." When she told him that she was not, the man left. It is believed the same man may have stolen the money.

BOBO TO BE ACTING NIGHT POLICE CHIEF

Brown Discontinues Rotation of Inspectors Put in Force by Glassford.

The practice of having police inspectors as night supervisors of police was discontinued yesterday by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, who designated Capt. J. E. Bobo as permanent night supervisor.

In the regime of Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, who resigned after a dispute with the District Commissioners, the post of night supervisor was filled by inspectors, who acted one night a week.

Under the new set-up, Capt. Bobo will work from 6 o'clock in the evening until midnight. He will be on call at his home in the event that anything of a serious nature occurs.

When Maj. Brown took office, Capt. Bobo was brought from the Fourth Precinct and for a time took charge of police property during the illness of Capt. William G. Stott. When Capt. Stott recovered Maj. Brown decided to use Capt. Bobo to relieve the strain of work on the inspectors, who, though working during the day, were obliged to act as night supervisor one night each week.

Lee House Is Auctioned By Owen for $600,000

Lee House, eight-story stone and brick hotel, at the northwest corner of Fifteenth and L streets, was purchased at public auction yesterday for $600,000 by Edwin J. Noyes, sole bidder, who said he represented an undisclosed principal. The sale was advertised by Union Trust Co., as trustee, and Vernon G. Owen was the auctioneer.

The structure, containing more than 200 rooms, was erected in 1921 by Kenwood Corporation, J. H. De Sibour being the architect and R. P. Whitty Co. the builders. The building, 100 feet wide and 124 feet deep, was constructed at an estimated cost of $475,000.

James W. Fultz, 82, Dies in Stair Fall

He was found lying at the foot of the steps by his grandson, William A. Applebey, 11, of 1601 Minnesota avenue northeast. Young Applebey called Dr. J. Rodery Young, of 1400 M street northwest, who pronounced Mr. Fultz dead.

Coroner Joseph D. Rogers was notified and ordered the body turned over to an undertaker. All indications point to accidental death, but a certificate had not been issued last night.

Wet Months

Precipitation for October, November and December Above Normal.

Washington has been almost "all wet" during the last three months.

October, November and December were all exceedingly wet months, it was learned at the United States Weather Bureau. The precipitation for October and November was the second highest on record. The rainfall in October was 7.40 inches. The normal precipitation for this month is 2.84.

November, usually the month with lowest precipitation in the year, had a rainfall in 1932 of 6.43 inches, the normal being 2.84 inches.

December's precipitation was 3.93 inches above the normal of 3.32 inches. December was a month of climatic contrasts as evidenced by an all-time record for snowfall over a 24-hour period on December 17, with 12 inches, and the warmest Christmas on record, with a high temperature of 68 degrees.

LELLI MURDER CASE 'DISCOVERY' IS MADE

Slaying Will Be Cleared Up Within 48 Hours, Is Only Word of Police.

After a conference between homicide squad detectives and Montgomery County authorities at police headquarters last night it was announced that a "startling discovery" concerning the murder of Guilio Lelli had been made.

The detectives would not even hint at the nature of the discovery, but said the case would be cleared up within 48 hours.

Coincident with the announcement of the "break" in the case, which has baffled authorities since the bullet-torn body of the young Italian was found in North Chevy Chase Sunday afternoon, the four men who had been held on investigation charges were released.

They, Philip Adams, Agitino Restifo, Alfred Mori and Robert E. Delay, were released to their attorney, Joseph Kelly, who will be responsible for their appearance should detectives wish to question them further.

Wardman Receiver Costs Are Studied

Attitude of Bar Members on Fees of $15,000 Is Sought.

Desiring to learn the attitude of members of the bar toward the request of the three receivers for the Wardman Real Estate Properties, Inc., for fees of $15,000 each, together with a fee of $15,000 for the legal services of the law firm of Douglas, Obear & Douglas, Justice Oscar R. Luhring, in the District Supreme Court, yesterday held a session to listen to arguments.

Several leading attorneys said they believed that Maj. Julius I. Peyser, Thomas P. Carson and Joseph P. Tumulty, the receivers, had earned more than $15,000 fees because of the responsibility of administering the vast Wardman Properties, and they also declared the legal services rendered by the law firm to the receivers well merited the fee asked.

Attorney William B. O'Connell opposed the payment of $15,000 fees to all of the receivers. He said he believed only one of them should receive that much. Justice Luhring said he would take the matter of paying the fees under advisement, with a decision forthcoming this week.

Three Men Accused In Cigarette Thefts

Leonard E. Jones, 23, of 3608 New Hampshire avenue northwest, and Harry William Reed, 26, of 26 Randolph place northwest, were charged with grand larceny, and Oscar Weinstock, 36, 6645 Georgia avenue northwest, was charged with receiving stolen property last night in connection with the alleged theft of several thousand dollars worth of cigarettes from the Peoples Drug Store warehouse at Florida avenue and Eckington place northeast.

The cigarettes were stolen in small quantities over a period of several weeks.

Clothing Worth $50 Stolen.

Clothing valued at $50 was reported stolen from the home of Earl P. Eagleson at 225 Third street northwest.

LAW TO CURB RENTS IN CAPITAL OPPOSED

R. J. Whiteford Tells Rotary Club Move Would Hit Investments.

Strong objection to enactment of rent laws in the District was voiced yesterday by Roger J. Whiteford, attorney, speaking before the Washington Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon in the Willard Hotel.

His objection was based on the grounds that such laws would drive away investment capital. He also pleaded for less interference with local business operations and the cessation of radical criticisms of local business groups which are not based upon accurate interpretation of facts.

"The alleged exorbitant profits reaped by real estate organizations," he said, "are not shown to exist. A careful survey made by the Washington Real Estate Board, covering over 1,400 apartment house units showed that on the basis of assessed valuation 64 per cent of these units showed a return of less than 5 per cent.

"If interest on trusts and mortgages is taken into consideration the average owner's return is only 2.3 per cent. It should be noted further that 12½ cents out of every rental dollar received must be paid out for local real estate taxes."

3 Escape Serious Hurts When Auto Overturns

Although their car turned over several times after striking a fire plug on Wisconsin avenue, George B. Pfeifer, 20, 4838 Forty-second street northwest; William Howes, 19, 3851 Beecher street northwest, and Michael J. Donoghue, 19, 1310 B street southeast, yesterday afternoon escaped with only minor lacerations.

After being treated at Georgetown Hospital, they were all arrested on charges of intoxication. Police were unable to ascertain which of the boys was driving the car.

Assault Suspect Held for Jury.

Charged with an assault on a 12-year-old girl, Ernest J. Acosta yesterday was held for grand jury action on a $5,000 bond when he was arraigned in Police Court. The father of the girl attacked Acosta and beat him so badly he had to be taken to a hospital where police brought the girl to her home after the attack.

RELIEF OF $625,000 FOR CAPITAL PASSES HOUSE AFTER FIGHT

Several Efforts to Cut Down $50,000 Distribution Expense Fails.

An appropriation of $625,000 for local unemployment relief in the first six months of this year was approved yesterday by the House. Members passed, without a change, the first deficiency bill containing the item, and sent it to the Senate.

Several attempts to pare down the $50,000 allowed in the bill for salaries and administrative expenses incidental to local relief activities, were voted down viva voce.

Representative Miles C. Allgood (Democrat), Alabama, to gain the floor, moved that the entire item be stricken out. Later he asked to withdraw the amendment, but Representative John C. Schafer (Republican), Wisconsin, insisted on a vote. Allgood was the only one to vote for it.

Three Urge Slashes.

Among those seeking to reduce the amount allotted to administrative expenses were Representative Lankford (Republican), Virginia, who asked that it be cut to $10,000; Representative Taber (Republican), New York, who wanted to trim it to $25,000, and Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, who sought to reduce it to $20,000.

Allgood complained that $625,000 would be appropriated for the District and nothing for the rest of the country. It was explained, however, that the local relief item will come entirely out of District appropriations.

Pointing to urgent local relief needs, among those who spoke for the measure were Representatives LaGuardia (Republican), New York; Representative Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts; Representative Holaday (Republican), Illinois, and Representative Patterson (Democrat), Alabama.

Return to Work Item Loses.

An amendment to appropriate $606,000 additional for Bureau of Immigration needs, was sponsored by Chairman Samuel Dickstein, of the House immigration committee, who pointed out that many valuable employes of the bureau are now on furlough and others will have to be released.

Although Republican Floor Leader Snell, a large group of Republicans and the Tammany delegation came to the support of the amendment, and it was approved on viva voce and division counts, it was defeated on a roll call vote after Appropriations Chairman Byrns had pointed out that neither the President nor the Budget Bureau had recommended the item.

Tenants Fix Steps To Fight High Rent

Reports of Five Living in One Room Are Heard at Meeting.

Protesting against high rents in the city and the squalid living conditions in congested down-town areas, members of the Tenants League, meeting at 212 H street northwest last night, elected an executive committee of fifteen members to study housing problems in the city block where they live in preparation for a report to the congressional committee investigating rents in the District.

More than 100 persons crowded the meeting hall of the organization and volunteered to recruit friends and neighbors to participate in the work of the group. Reports were made of families of more than five members living in one room.

The league went on record objecting to evictions for nonpayment of rent. Marx Lewis, head of the Victor Berger Memorial Foundation, addressed the meeting, stressing the importance of mass objection in obtaining relief from high rentals and unlivable quarters. The league is sponsored by the Socialist Party of the District.

Man Spends Last Chapter of Life Reading as He Waits on Gas.

Apparently having read amusing fiction until the gas from an open jet snuffed out his life, William B. Brown, 26, was found dead in the bathroom of his apartment at 1206 Euclid street northwest late yesterday.

Lying on the floor with a novel, "The Taxi Dancer," by Perry Shannon, and a magazine opened at a story, "Dancing Dan's Christmas," by Damon Runyon, on either side, the body was discovered by his landlady when she went to clean his rooms.

Sealed letters addressed to his wife, Mrs. Lucille Brown, said to live at Leesburg, Va., and his mother, Mrs. Clara Fisher Brown, of Bluffton, Ind., were found in his room. Scrawled on an old envelope was a note saying: "My last words, I love you, Lucille. I love my baby, Charles. I love you."

It was learned that Baby Charles was only about a year old.

The landlady said the man had occupied the apartment since last October. Until a few days ago he was employed as a laundry truck driver. Since losing the job, she said, he had been despondent and had stated that he had little money and was trying to live on 50 cents a day.

He did not leave his rooms yesterday or the day before, but the landlady said she had heard him walking around practically all Tuesday night.

13 New Cases of Flu Reported Since Jan. 1

Health Department officials predicted that the mild wave of influenza which arose in the District during December is on the wane, as a check yesterday showed that only thirteen new cases had been reported since the new year began.

Even the approximately 200 cases reported in December were said to be of an extremely mild nature for the most part, and at no time did the disease reach epidemic proportions.

Justice Stafford Named To Introduce Masefield

Justice Wendell Phillips Stafford, retired, of the District of Columbia Supreme Court, will introduce John Masefield, January 13 at 4:40 o'clock, when he appears in a reading of his own works at the National Theater. Justice Stafford, himself a poet of consequence, has accepted the invitation of Mrs. Lymna B. Swormstedt, who is in charge of arrangements here.

Among Mr. Masefield's readings will be "The Everlasting Mercy," "Salt Water Ballads," "The Widow in Bye Street," "Reynard the Fox" and many of his poetic dramas.

D. C. BEER-FOR-TAX BILL SAFELY PLACED WITH HOUSE GROUP

The District beer-for-revenue bill last night was safely ensconced in the wringing wet House District judiciary subcommittee, after an effort to report the measure out of the House District committee was defeated by dry Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas.

The subcommittee, headed by Representative Palmisano (Democrat), Maryland, a former bartender, will consider revenue features of the bill and possible hearings at an early meeting.

Reference of the measure to subcommittee was on motion of Representative Holmes (Republican), Massachusetts, following a sharp verbal tilt between Representative Patman and Representative Loring M. Black, jr. (Democrat), author of the bill.

States Already at Work.

"Why take up the time of Congress with this?" asked Patman, who branded the Black bill a "gesture" that would mean nothing unless the Volstead act is amended to permit the sale of beer.

Black's contention was that various States are already at work on local beer legislation; that the Collier national beer bill eventually will pass both Houses; and that the 3.2 per cent District beer bill should follow the national measure to the White House for signature. He said the District should start the "celebration" following repeal of the Volstead act.

After the measure was referred to the judiciary subcommittee Patman sought to have it sent instead to the fiscal affairs subcommittee. Chairman Mary T. Norton refused to entertain his motion.

Point of No Quorum.

In the course of committee debate, Patman raised a point of no quorum, which prevented the committee from considering Representative Black's request for a committee investigation into the bonus army's evacuation of Washington.

The dry Texan made a futile effort to have the committee consent to a policy of no action on the Black bill until the national measure has become law. The committee finally agreed not to dispose of the bill until every member of the committee had been notified when the measure would come up for action.
